Late night notes...

Under an ominous sky at a Monday night rehearsal in early June, senior Renee

Krynock practices the marching band's opener.

"The evening practices were a relief after the scorching heat of band camp," said

Krynock. She played flute since fifth grade and studied with past drum major, Jason May.

Six Degrees Connex US

Spirited six...

During an enthusiastic football game against Butler, seniors Robert Riggle and Eli Suchetski, sophomores Cody Grantz and Zack Shannon, and seniors Josh Salm and Tommy Magness scream at the ref for making a bad call. "Our real reason for painting up before the game was to get our shirts off in front of the ladies," said Suchetski. The team rallied to a shut out victory over the Tornados with a score of 31-0.

Did you know that only six connections relate every person on earth? For many, the concept boggles the mind.

Still, when you think of everyone who you know and their locations, the degrees of separation simply do not seem so vast. We choose to let X mark our spot...our school...
our community...
and our center of the universe. Furthermore, we propose that the rest of the world connects to and relies upon our actions to function. From our center to the ends of the earth, we aim to show that six degrees connex us...

and it all originates from those whom walk the halls of Kiski Area High.

Alex Nigra, 12th

Can you feel the heat?

In the intense heat of summer camp, senior Krysta Geary applies deodorant during a break. Geary said, "We have to re-apply B-O guard every break we get or else you can smell us on the other side of the field." At the end of practice, Geary went back to her bag to find her deodorant had melted all over everything.

Heartfelt melodies...

With his hand over his heart, junior Joe Chiodo sings his final note in "Good Old Reliable Nathan." "The seniors of 2007 contributed a lot of talent to the cast," said Chiodo. Later in the show, Chiodo acted as a gambler in a New York City sewer.

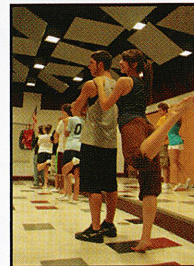

Quality students...

At the September 7 Pep Rally, senior Nick Higgins impersonates his favorite teacher, Mr. Fassio. Higgins said, "Call it divine intervention, or the kinship of all living things, but I tell you that at that moment, I was Mr. Fassio." After Higgin's short time on the microphone, a roar of laughter and applause overcame the gymnasium.

Come sail away...

In the middle of the San Francisco Bay, senior Julia Rozewicz hoists a sail to let the wind carry the boat further adrift. About the trip, she said, "The most unforgettable part of the trip was when we sailed under the Golden Gate Bridge." Rozewicz and her family travelled to California for ten days in the middle of June, 2007.

Summer swing...

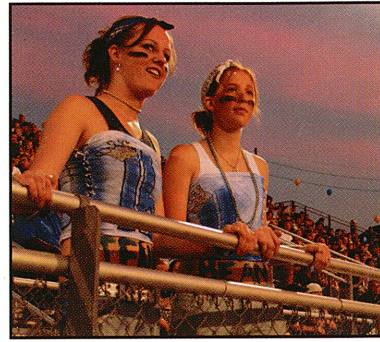

Shortly after a pivot turn, senior Melena Robertson performs a simple back kick. "Personally, I think Sunny Side of the Street is one of our best dances in this year's show choir shows. It is very Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire," said Robertson. The dedicated group of singers and dancers attended practices for two weeks in July from 9-12 each day.

Oh say can he sing...

After the Homecoming Parade, junior Dane Farrell sings the National Anthem at the Homecoming Game against Hempfield. "I felt more comfortable this time because I sang the National Anthem last year as well," said Farrell. Kiski won the game by a score of 22-21 when sophomore Tarique Godson returned a punt for a touchdown late in the fourth quarter.

All painted up...
Anxiously awaiting the announcement of Homecoming Queen, seniors Nadine Artman and Becky Hallwirth focus on the center of the field in excitement. In support of senior Jenna Pounds, Hallwirth said, "I would do anything and everything for my friends." Their hopes for the evening came true as Pounds became queen and Kiski won the game against Hempfield.

Becoming involved is extremely important because it gives students the chance to show what skills
they have outside the classroom.

Steve Calderone, 10th

Girl power...
In hopes of impressing the choreographer, senior Deanna Nacey performs her show choir moves as sharply as possible. On learning routines, Deanna said, "The most difficult part is remembering what motions occur at what point in the song." Deanna danced since the age of six and has taken chorus since elementary school.

Reach for the sky...

To review their latest visuals, expert Andy Toth models the movements for freshman Jessica Summerhill, junior Allison Bollinger, freshman Shelley Shaner and other members of the band. "The fist wrapped in blood visual was a part of the heartbeat visuals for the beginning of the show," said Bollinger. The regiment both began and ended their competition show with a heartbeat visual.

It wasn't a nice thought. I'd already finished show choir camp, it didn't seem fair that I still had two more weeks of early mornings and constant repetitions, only this time in the hot sun all day at band camp," junior Rebekah Aber said as she reflected upon her summer vacation. Most people did not realize that band camp started a mere two days after the rigorous show choir camp had just finally ended.

While most students enjoyed late nights and slept through most mornings, several school activities held practice during the blistering summer months, which dominated a vast percentage of some students' vacation. Band and show choir possibly held the most responsibility for any mutinous feelings from students.

Though some tempers rose to degrees nearly as high as the temperature, each member sooner or later remembered the fact that he or she had, in fact, volunteered for this. "I knew what I was signing up for though. Each camp had its benefits, and I liked the music we performed in both," Aber said.

Both fear the dark.

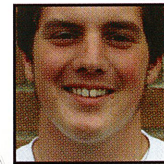

Play under review...
With his eyes half shut, senior Josh Wilson tries to stay awake as Coach Heater and the varsity football team study film. When asked about earning respect at camp, Josh said, "Respect is due to everybody, but I don't ask for mine; I take it." Josh enjoyed playing defensive end on Friday nights.

Back hand in action...
Looking to get his team ready for the upcoming season, girls tennis coach Mr. Ralph Antenucci returns a serve in a practice match. Mr. Antenucci said, "We were 6-13 overall, but 5-9 in a very tough section. Everyone worked hard and I am proud of the team this year." When not on the tennis courts, Mr. Antenucci taught economics and psychology.

"At church camp, we had to jump in the pool every morning at 7 AM."
Melissa Brown, 10

"At football camp, if I didn't get up early, then coach Heater would make me run almost all day."

Icy treats

On her break from band practice, senior Rebecca Ballentine cools off by eating a freeze pop. With a sense of humor, Rebecca said, "I couldn't quite get the note out." To cool off even more, freshman Anna Spier poured water down Ballentine's back before practice started up again.

On that note...

Under the hot summer sun, sophomore Nate Brown plays trombone on the band parking lot during summer camp. "The heat was very gruesome during the afternoon hours," said Brown. He further said that the asphalt made it seem like they had to march on a grill.

How did you motivate yourself to get up early for camp?

if you saw them roaming the halls," senior Julia Rozewicz said. Students walked like zombies from the buses through the chilly, misty air of dawn in a sleep-like state. They went from class to class, solved problems, and studied. As soon as the bell rang, a completely different story unraveled. "Going to school with people, they seem pretty dull. Then you get to Ford City and they start jumping off cliffs," senior Amy Antal said about her cliff jumping tactics.

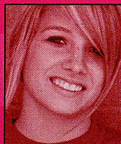

During the summer, students flexed their extreme muscles. Julia Rozewicz sailed underneath the Golden Gate Bridge, while junior Jessica Wawrzyniak had an extreme biking experience. "I was in a race which I biked 150 miles in 2 days, when I hit rumble strips on the highway and wiped out," Wawrzyniak said. She received countless stitches and suffered various injuries. Whether in snow, sun, water or highway, students found ample outlets for their extreme fixations.

Fun in the sun...

High Hopes...

To follow regulations, senior Michael Rovnak asks the tower for clearance to taxi onto the active runway. Rovnak said, "Not too many teenagers were flying planes before they could drive a car." Shortly afterward, Rovnak flew off, just after a thunderstorm had passed.

Rapid descent...
Desperately trying to keep the raft from crashing into the rocks of the Youghiogheny River, junior Jaimi Hicks and senior Jenna Pounds paddle down stream. "Jenna and I had a blast travelling down the river," said Hicks. Both girls served as editors of the 2008 Campus yearbook.

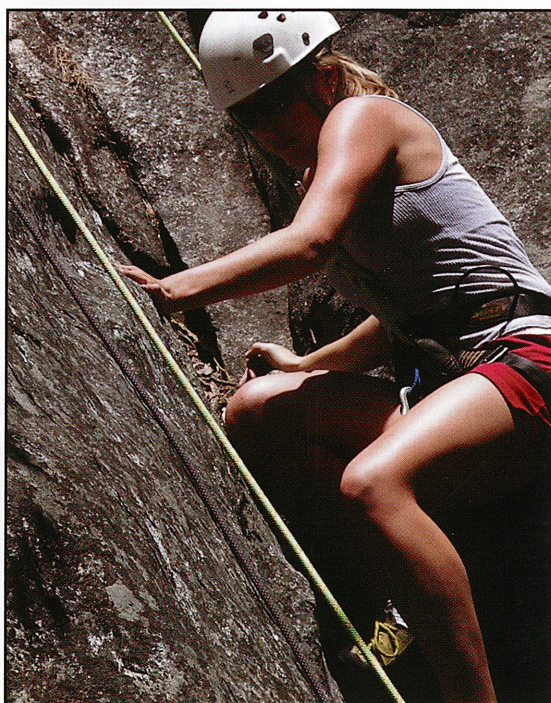

Trigger happy...

Fully dressed in his warrior paintball gear, senior Corey Shellhammer sets his sights on his next victim. "Even though my friends claim to be pretty good, none of them are really at my level," said Shellhammer. "He bought most of his gear from Dunham's in Natrona Heights."

Rock on...

At Yosemite National Park in California, senior Julia Rozewicz ascends up a cliff face. "Climbing up the side of the cliff was definitely one of the most extreme things I have ever done," said a brave Rozewicz. When she reached the apex, Rozewicz marveled at the valley view below.

Flying high...

On vacation in the Outer Banks of North Carolina, seniors Zak Murdock and Brittney Heater clear the waves before they take flight. "Once we reached our max height, we could see the entire island and for miles down the coast," said Murdock. The two and the Murdock family spent a week during July of 2007 in the North Carolina sun.

In mid bite, junior Karly Thompson satisfies her appetite on the way to an away volleyball match. "Before every game, I'd get a chicken sandwich from Wendy's and would have to fight off Charisse Skinner so she wouldn't steal it," said Thompson. She preferred the 99 cent chicken sandwich to any other item on Wendy's menu.

At the Kiski Valley Inn, senior Shawn Rigatti bakes an olive and tomato pizza. "I always burn pizzas. Usually Ben Crutchman makes the pizzas," said a concerned Rigatti. On a typical night the duo chefs make between 5 and 10 pizzas.

Picnic at practice...

On lunch break from the all day practice at Davis Field, members of the marching band feast on food provided by the boosters. Quite seriously, senior Rebecca Ballentine said, "Don't come between band kids and their food." Ballentine spent most of the lunchtime trying to keep senior Mike Kline from stealing her food.

Open wide...

In the courtyard on an unusually warm early November day during C lunch, senior Alex Rupeka feeds an orange wedge to senior Pat Dalsass. "I was worried about contracting MRSA because you just never know where Alex's hands have been," jokingly said Dalsass. Although he rarely had the chance, he most enjoyed eating at his favorite restaurant, Villa Rosa, in Hershey, PA.

Vegetarians Find Food Choices Less Than Meaty

"It's the lack of selection. The average restaurant has three food choices for me," senior Kathryn Russell said, grumbling over the incompetence of the last restaurant she entered.

Vegetarians and picky eaters often hoped in vain that a restaurant would satisfy their strict dietary preferences. Upon looking at the menu, each of them quickly realized that it offered little hope. Having accepted their fate, these picky eaters sighed and settled down for a less than stellar meal. "I usually get plain pizza with tomato sauce," junior Mallory Soulcheck said concerning her choices. "Moe's Southeast Grill is the easiest, at least as mainstream restaurants go. I avoid McDonald's and most other fast-food," Russell said regarding the ease and difficulty of eating at certain restaurants. The dietary choices of vegetarians and picky eaters limited their choice of restaurant, but no regrets about the lifestyle surfaced.

Story by Nicole Titler, 12

Band break...

With his mouth wide open, sophomore Colin Martin enjoys his lunch during the all day practice for the home show. "I couldn't remember what kind of sandwich it was, but I do remember that it wasn't very good," said Martin. He packed a lunch full of goodies for every day of band camp.

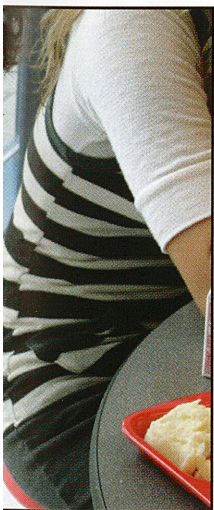

Something tasty...

On a typical Thursday night at the North Apollo Hoagie Shop, senior Angelea Kuruc works hard slicing bologna. "The Hoagie Shop is a fun, but difficult place to work at because it is always busy," said Kuruc. She often concentrated hard to not lose a finger while slicing meat.

Stained Dane...

If junior Bethany Plowman hadn't thrown barbecue sauce all over junior Dane Farrell's shirt, he wouldn't need the Tide-to-Go pen. "Everyone should have one," said Farrell. Soon afterwards, the two got into a fist fight.

Daddy's little girl...

After the anticipated announcement of Homecoming Queen, senior Jenna Pounds embraces her father. About her initial reaction, she said, "I wasn't expecting them to say my name. I was so thrilled!" The Pounds family owned a turkey farm and store about a mile from the school.

Dancing dames...

On September 22, seniors Tiffany Berry and Bethany Gottshall put on their moves at the Homecoming Dance. Gottshall said, "Tiff and I spent most of the time on the dance floor together and we had a blast!" Afterwards, the two went to Pizza Hut with six other students.

Pressure, pressure, pressure," said senior Jenna Pounds, revealing the reality behind

Humbled Queen Embraces Pressures

the glamour of homecoming court. Imagine having the entire student body whisper your name as you pass. "There she goes." Will we hear her name proclaimed into the night as our one and only Homecoming Queen? Certainly, the girls endured the immense stress of the weeks leading up to the big night with grace and poise, yet they felt the weight of the world as all eyes locked onto them.

From finding convertibles to finding the perfect pair of flats, the girls juggled and balanced every ounce of conflict and drama. Extra, often unwanted attention followed the girls from school to home, to even their communities and churches. "I hated people looking at me," said

Pounds anxiously.

Reflecting the intense moment, "Every single girls' fists were clenched so tightly," said onlooking sophomore Brynn Aljoe. At the joyous proclamation of "Jenna Pounds," the tension burst into the warm, beautiful night, allowing the celebration to finally commence.

Dancing the night away, senior Matt Pokusa, junior Ian Vergari, and senior Jenna Pounds get their groove on at the Homecoming Dance. Pokusa said, "Jenna couldn't tell Ian and I apart." Afterwards, Pokusa and Vergari fought over who got to dance with Pounds next.

For the Record...
In preparation for the Homecoming Parade, senior Maggie Land zip-ties decorations onto the float. "We put a lot of work into making our senior Homecoming as retro as possible, but nothing compared to Talmadge's pants," said Land. Senior Jenna Pounds and her escort, senior Matt Pokusa, rode to the field in Land's Mazda Miata convertible.

Bed-heads Focus on Morning Routines

I roll out of bed five minutes before I catch the bus, where I then proceed to fall asleep while listening to my iPod," senior Neal Henry said of his morning activities.

Before even roosters bothered waking up each morning, the students and staff of Kiski Area have already begun the day. A normal person might sleep until the last possible minute; yet some preferred to utilize the wee hours of dawn to complete other endeavors. Some of the most popular activities included cramming for biology exams, showering quickly, drinking gallons of coffee, and even exercising. "It's cooler and there are less people," sophomore Mandi McClain said commenting on her routine of jogging as the sun rises.

Eventually, the school day commenced and homeroom provided the last moments of free time before class. "It takes so long to get to the afternoon," senior Paige Manni said on her least favorite aspect of the morning.

Lights, camera, action!

Before the ring of the entry bell, senior Brad Arick focuses the GMK cameras. "Mike Kline and I would get to school about 7:10 everyday and start working on things for the show, previewing movies, focusing cameras, and previewing announcements," said Arick. Students counted on GMK each morning to provide them with the necessary news to progress successfully through each day.

Forcing herself to keep her eye open, senior Jamie Banks applies eye liner in the girls' bathroom. "I'm always running late and the bathroom is always crowded. I hate it," said Banks. She arrived at school late so frequently that she found herself doing her make-up in the bathroom almost three times a week.

Checks and balances...
Before the early morning rush, attendance secretary Mrs. Carole Patterson finishes up some financial bookkeeping from the previous day. Concerning her morning rituals, Patterson said, "Some mornings were more hectic than others." Students and teachers counted on Mrs. Patterson daily for an accurate accounting of those in attendance and those absent.

Pack rat...

To prepare for the day, junior James Miller sorts through his bookbag. "I never knew I looked so concentrated getting stuff out of my locker," jokingly said Miller. He spent the following minutes daily in homeroom 404 with Ms. Columbus.

Gate keeper...

Standing guard at the gates each morning, Mr. Dean Ridgeway watches students get off the buses. In regards to bus duty, Ridgeway said, "Rain, snow, sleet, hail, darkness or light, everyday bus duty. What a way to start the day." After struggling through the strenuous duty, he then enjoyed seven straight classes in a row.

Pole position...

In the early morning hours of September 26, members of Bible Club and all invited gather around the flagpole to thank God for another day. "It was great to have fellowship together and pray to the God that made us all," said senior Jeff Zito. The worshipers enjoyed both personal reflections and music as part of the event.

High off the ground...

Ready to pounce...

Low to the ground, senior Matt Krafick remains alert during an after school dodgeball game at the Valley Points YMCA. "A little go juice between the school and the 'Y' prepared me for the game," said Krafick. He tried not to throw at the weak links in the beginning; he saved them for the end.

Eye on the Ball...

Focused on the ball, senior Kate Shemak heads it upward for a Good Morning Kiski Video. "Unfortunately, you lose brain cells during this," said Shemak. She served in many soccer games as she has played on the girls soccer team for four years.

Strategic move...

Deep in thought, senior Dustin Schrecongost competes in a game of Stratego after he completed his homework. On his strategy, he said, "We don't quit at halftime, son. You don't score till you score!" In his spare time Schrecongost enjoyed competitive games of hockey and volleyball.

Fast on her feet...

Like a rolling locomotive, junior Ellie Weyant runs the ball in an attempt to get a first down at the Powder Puff game held on Tuesday, October 16. "The game was intense and tons of fun. We all enjoyed playing football," said Weyant. The juniors lost to the seniors by a score of 18-6.

Gamers Dodge Reality, Smash Competition

Imagine having the most fun you will ever have in your life, only we had it all the time," senior Travis Charlton said to describe the Smash Brothers parties some students participated in on the weekends. The rapid clicking of controller buttons, the earth-shaking sounds of digital music, the glow of multiple TVs in an otherwise dark room, and cries of "ownage!" and "spiked!" meant only one thing to these students: video game night. "The gatherings started late at night, and ended even later, usually divided in half by a fourth meal run to Taco Bell," Charlton said.

One video game in particular, Super Smash Brothers Melee, developed a very dedicated following. The games however constituted only part of the atmosphere of a gamers' night. "The best part was that after a tough loss, you could just crack open another Mountain Dew and give it another shot. Aside from the occasional Mountain Dew stains and thumb blisters, everything turned out well and everyone involved had a smashing good time, to say the least," said Charlton.

Adorned in blues and golds, senior Amy Antal paints senior Josh Fouse's face. "The worst part was when the paint dried and cracked all over everyone's skin. It really hurt," said Antal. She and seniors Ciara Brown and Bettina Vaccarello painted up all the boys before each game of the season.

From head to toe...
Split down the middle in school colors, senior Mark Delo anxiously awaits the upcoming play. "Well, this is my senior year so me and my friends went to every game and painted ourselves to support the team," said dedicated Delo. Many people scorned at him for getting blue paint on their clothing.

To first get me pumped up, I listen to 'Get Buck In Here' on the way to the rally.

Painted Up Zealots Support Home Team

Then we head over to the cook-out and eat some dogs and burgers," senior Allie Hileman said, describing her pre-kickoff ritual at home games.

Great food, high energy, and loads of blue and gold paint composed the menu for an electrifying Rally in the Alley. "It's a great way to get pumped up for the game. I love how everyone gets together to share their excitement for the night's game," Hileman said.

Whether cheering in the stands, smothering their bodies in paint, or storming the field after a win, students always found a way to express their support for the home team. Routines varied from person to person, but the players never saw a tranquil moment. "You have to live up your high school years and take it for all it's worth. I go to Kiski, and I dream, eat, sleep, and breathe Kiski," said Hileman.

From heartfelt messages on bare chests at Cross Country meets to decorative, glittery faces at football games, students and fans alike showed that school spirit never goes out of style.

Warrior paint...
Anxious to root for the home team, senior Tonilynn Frazzini paints sophomore Zack Shannon's body for the game. Shannon said, "We all got to run onto the field with the cheerleaders." Many fans attended the pregame festivities at the Rally in the Alley where they all painted up.

Cheering on the cross country team, seniors Zach Stickel and David Bieranoski watch the race start. When asked why they were painted up for a sport with such a little fan base, Stickel said, "The cross country runners receive little support for their hard work, so we decided to support them as much as possible." The avid fans helped the cross country team to win the meet.

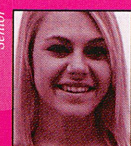

Pregame perfection...
Near the goal line, the varsity cheerleaders pay tribute to their country with the playing of the National Anthem. On her least favorite cheer, senior Lacey Depanicis said, "I hated the 'Roll It - Shake It' cheer most because I always messed it up." The football team won the game by one point over Hempfield.

Treacherous Tests Trigger Migraines

It felt absolutely wonderful to spend a bright and sunny early

Story by Alex Nigra, 12

Saturday morning inside of a school taking a test. I liked nothing better than waking up early and going dull pencil after pencil as my mind, half-clouded by sleep, makes an attempt at intelligence. The ACTs provided the perfect environment for me to do this," senior Zach Stickel said describing one of his favorite pastimes. Traditionally the domain of the SAT juggernaut, the Mid-Atlantic region has increasingly played host to a different standardized test, the ACT.

Consequently, the scores of students looking toward the weekend for solace instead became involved in the rigors of yet another standardized test. This meant getting to sleep early on a Friday night, waking up early on Saturday, and trying to focus on a test for nearly three hours. Not all students dreaded this new examination, however. "The ACTs were an interesting alternative to the SATs and provided me a different opportunity to flex my intellectual muscle," senior Meg Mszyco said.

Just my type...
In room 417 with Mr. Schaeffer, senior Nick Caratelli completes a timed test on the keyboard. "I've been known to type over 30 GWAM," said Caratelli. Of all his classes, Caratelli aced tests in manufacturing the most.

Scrambling to remember her notes, junior Sammi Cannella takes a test in Pre-Calculus. "I drew an 'I Love Pre-Calc' sign on the test to see if Mr. Toland would give me bonus," said Cannella. She had trouble finding time to study as she worked as a waitress at G & G Restaurant.

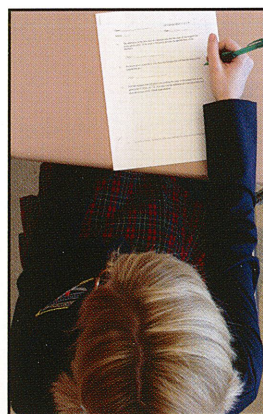

Long and winding road...

Nearing the finish line, senior Stephanie Riffer strides out during the last stretch of the mile run in gym class. "After this year, no more cal and no more mile," said Riffer. Despite a cold on the day of the run, Riffer managed to run and finish the test.

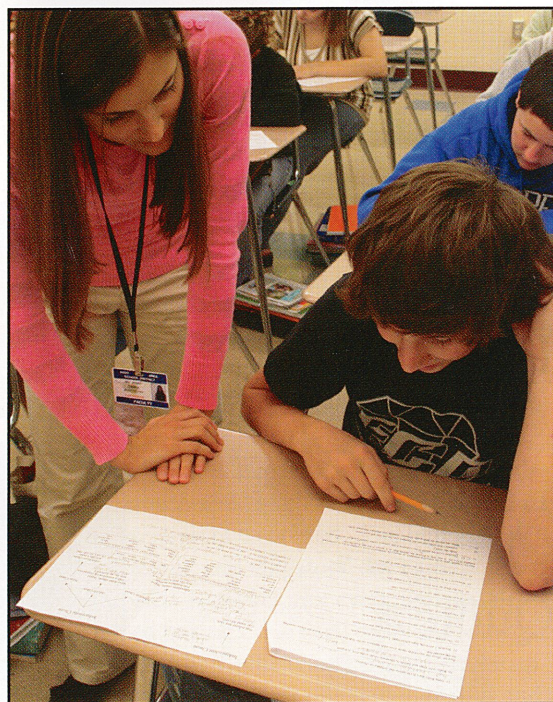

Halloween derivatives...

Dressed as the typical school girl, senior Nicole McMahon scans a test in her academic calculus class. "My most difficult class was AP Bio. We always have loads of homework and are always taking notes," said McMahon. She had calculus just after lunch during period DE.

Helping hand...

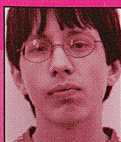

Doing his best to complete a test in English class, freshman Chandler Lindgren gets some help from Ms. Danka. "Ms. Danka made 9th grade English easy and fun compared to 8th grade English," said Lindgren. Still, he identified Mr. Best's CADD class as his favorite.

Assess the situation...

In the LGI, senior Jeremy Keim takes a health test. "The class with the hardest tests that I have this year was Economics," said Keim. He further said that he didn't really prepare for the health exam.

On a warm fall morning, senior Benjamin Crutchman kisses his kitten, Sammy, good morning. "I like all of my animals, but I love my kitties," Crutchman said. He further said that when Sammy rolls on the ground, she couldn't act any cuter.

Go fish...
Seen through the aquarium glass, sophomore Derek Ghrist watches his fish, Pete, swim through a replica of ancient Greek architecture. "We can't keep any other fish in the tank because Pete always eats them. He goes through four dozen minnows a week," said Ghrist. When they got him, Petey measured only 3/4 of an inch and has grown now to over seven inches.

Pets Pounce, Slither Into Owners' Hearts

"My cat McCloud was a very strange animal. He truly answered to his name, he listened to simple commands, and whenever you would pet him, he drooled because he forgot to swallow. I swear that he wanted to be a dog," senior Zach Forrest said during a conversation about unusual pets.

Whether alligators to chinchillas, or cats to cockroaches, it seemed as though the more ordinary the pet, the more bizarre its behavior. Senior Sydney Martier's dog, Zoe, dreaded the final two steps of the staircase. "When he got to that certain step, he stopped. He barked until someone came to pick him up and carry him down those last two steps," Martier said. Alas, the cockroach and the chinchilla sat there all day, no excitement to behold. The highlight of the lizards' and alligators' day came at their sunbath. However, not every unusual pet proved boring. "He used our porch swing as a big perch. In the winter I would wake up in the morning, pull open the curtains, and there would be my peacock," senior Renee Krynock said, vividly recalling her own strange pet.

Head over heels...

In her yard in Washington Township, senior Angelea Kuruc and her snake, Rosie, enjoy quality time together. On how to occupy her friend, Kuruc said, "I just put her on my wrist and she occupies herself." Kuruc also enjoyed playing with her two dogs, Nyla and Odie.

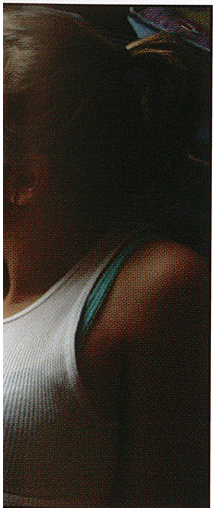

Birds of a feather...

In her back yard, junior Charlene Munko feeds her pet rooster, Henry, a banana. "If Henry even just sees me with a banana he'll follow me around until he can eat some of it. It's adorable," said Munko. During the feeding, Henry kept backing off the stump so Munko had to hold on to him.

Double the pleasure...

On the floor in front of her dogs, sophomore Celia Brewer looks intently at Reilly and Gidget. "We have to be careful when people come over because Reilly's really protective and Gidget is too," said Brewer. The Brewers lived in Mamont along route 366.

Band together...

Late into the evening on September 15, members of the Kiski Marching Band perform their competition show for the first time on away turf at Norwin. "After getting home at 11:30 the prior night, waking up for an 8 o'clock practice, and parading through Avonmore, we battled extreme physical fatigue while still trying to sell the show," said sincere senior Courtney Grafton. The band placed first that evening, winning all three caption awards.

Game face on...

Sound asleep, junior Rachel Zaydak catches up on her rest before the upcoming volleyball game. "I probably snored a little, and someone drew something on my forehead," said Zaydak. She played defense specialist for the JV volleyball team.

"I think we've all had that feeling, the alarm clock is going off while your bedroom is still pitch black and you just wonder how it's possible that it's six o'clock already. It doesn't matter if you stayed up late or got a good night's sleep. It's just early," junior Alexis Hoffer said when asked about sleep deprivation during school. Looking into almost any class one could see that a plethora of students did indeed experience this at one point.

Perhaps school would lose some of its charm if a few students in every class did not nod off occasionally, giving the other students a familiar twinge of pleasure, for they took comfort in knowing that at least one other person felt more exhausted. That gladness, however, did not come close to the tremendous sense of misery when one found himself in that hapless position. "I understand that school is not the place to sleep, but I also think that teachers need to be more understanding," Hoffer said. Jokingly, Mr. Fantaski said, "Depending on which class, I sometimes welcomed my little darlings to nod off."

"I like French, but sometimes my mind wanders and I decided to catch up on a few zzz's that I didn't get last night," said Kunkle. Apparently, the lesson on past tense verbs and direct object pronouns became too much for Kunkle.

Sweet dreams...
While Mr. Lohr speaks of groups and formal organizations, senior Evan Strellec catches up on his sleep. "I ate a ton of candy last night since it was Halloween and I didn't go to bed until around 1:00," said a drowsy Strellec. He spent the evening handing out candy to the neighborhood trick-or-treaters in Vandergrift.

Good, Clean Wash Creates Dirty Job

Contrary to what some people might think, dirty jobs are everywhere," sophomore Kristi Titler said regarding job choices in the area.

Walking into the local BK Lounge, one could never conceivably imagine the dirty appliances used to cook his or her meal. The inadequacies of lazy workers definitely affected the BK Lounge. The indolence of certain employees resulted in neglected duties and responsibilities. Thus, the formerly respectable BK Lounge became a dirty establishment.

A more blatant dirty job transpired at Pound's Turkey Farm. Each Thanksgiving season, employees treated and processed thousands of turkeys. Many teens assisted in the exceptionally arduous and time-consuming job. "Everyone knew what happened at Pounds Turkey Farm, but we loved it too much to consider not going there," said Titler. Regardless of the task, workers still got into the trenches to do battle.

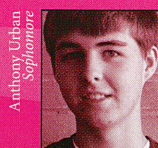

Dishpan hands?

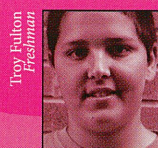

Working hard on the job, senior Shawn Rigatti washes dishes at Marchitelli's Kiski Valley Inn near Saltsburg. Quite seriously, Rigatti said, "The world needs dishwashers in order to function properly. Without them, total chaos." He finished off the Friday evening making pizzas.

Both have bungee jumped.

Both have a camp in Elk County.

Never-ending job...
High above the ground, Bill Dilick and Dan Ferrero tackle the seemingly endless job of washing the school's front windows. "It's just another day in paradise," said Ferrero regarding the task. Ferrero joined the custodial staff on September 11, 2001, a day nobody will ever forget.

Trash talk...
Around 4 o'clock on an early November Friday afternoon, sweeper Marian Huska changes the trash bags in the office. Jokingly, she said, "The worst job I have to do is the fingered windows of the office front. I swear the kids don't know how to use a door handles." Huska has worked at the high school since 2003.

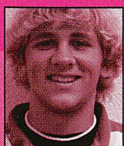

Nothing to it...
Cleaning up after a run of Thanksgiving dinner in Foods class, junior Chris Gardner gathers containers. "This was nothing. At G&G, I've had to clear plates with half-eaten food, puke, and even a dirty diaper on them," said Gardner. He said that he simply refused to do dishes at home.

What a waste!
On a job that never ends, senior Aaron Kiebler cleans the stall at his family's farm on route 819. Offering some advice, Kiebler said, "If you think you want to do this, think again." Kiebler further said that one time when he performed this duty, his dad threw a shovelful on him.

Saucy lady...
Long-time lunch lady, Mrs. Joni Palermo digs deep to clean out the kettle of pizza sauce on Crazy Dipper Day. Concerning dirty jobs in the kitchen, Palermo said, "The worst is cleaning out the pots after we cook the turkeys." Palermo has served students lunch for over 21 years.

Sticky situation...

Careful not to get it too thin, senior Mike Artman spreads modeling paste to create a relief painting. "Of all the mediums of art, I really like painting best. With painting, I can be more expressive," said Artman. For this project, he crafted a coy fish that he painted in orange and yellow tones.

Deeply concentrated, senior Sydney Martier paints a black and white portrait of herself on her garage. "It only looks like me if you squint," said Martier jokingly. She taped the canvas to her garage to assure both support and stability.

Leave an impression...

Focused on the task at hand, sophomore Nick McGuire, sets the rough shape for his coat of arms done on copper. "Diligent hands make the greatest work," said McGuire. He further said that he preferred Mr. Jewart's Art class more than any other class.

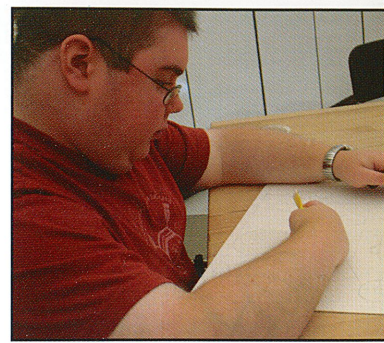

Quick color...

In quite a hurry, senior Matt Pokusa rushes to get his painting finished before its due date. "I'm using acrylic paints on cardboard for an art project," said Pokusa. He further said that he enjoyed listening to the Counting Crows while he paints because their music helps him to relax.

Going green...

Careful to mix colors perfectly, junior Kiersten Moyes paints her pencil drawing of a fairy. Surprisingly, Moyes said, "Although working with paints is a nice medium, I enjoy nothing more than using just plain old pencil and eraser." Beside painting, Moyes lent her talents also to performing in plays.

Drawing conclusions...
Focused to make each line perfect, junior Matt Dickun completes a sketch in art class. "It is a 15 by 20 inch illustration board. I am working on an abstract picture," Dickun said on the subject of the sketch. He enjoyed art so much that he has taken art at the high school for three years.

Artists Express Internal Emotions

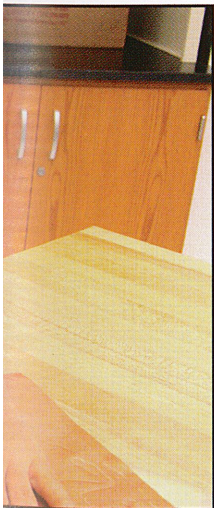

"Most of my better ideas are conjured up during times of high anxiety and/or love in my life. It helps me really 'feel' the art as it's being produced," junior Kiersten Moyes said while discussing her favorite subject.

The projects that emerged from Mr. Jewart's art classes amazed and astounded many people. Each project showed the unique and creative side of the artist, whether he or she crafted it from graphite or from materials found in the kitchen sink. "I incorporated cement, glitter, nails, wires, metal, springs, crayons, twigs, and a few other things into one project," senior Sydney Martier said. With inspiration at every turn, select individuals found a way to take what they had seen and transform it into their own work. Senior Anna Black said, "You cannot define an artist. They are all unique in their own way."

Despite the seriousness of the process, the jubilant artists found ways to enjoy themselves. "Bre Coward and I brought in a cake that we made. It was shaped like a palette and had multi-colored icing that looked like paint," Martier said.

we go crazy," said senior Jenna Pounds, regarding an unusual pastime. Jenna may not have had a river in her backyard, but she did reside on a farm. Due to the district's rural nature, many students grew up on farms, having acres and acres of rolling hills. Instead of next-door neighbors, they greeted cows, pigs, goats, sheep, horses, chickens, and turkeys when they stepped out onto their porch.

Though this lifestyle differed greatly from that of the resident of a housing plan or town, it did not lack excitement and entertainment. Jenna enjoyed sled riding, running, and having bonfires in her extensive "backyard." Senior Erica Liska spent her spare time caring for and riding her horses. "One time, though, my neighbor's horses escaped from their stable, and we had to chase them to bring them back," said Liska, recalling a favorite activity gotten out of hand. Whether chasing horses around the corral or in hot pursuit of rebel turkeys, life on the farm became anything but ordinary.

Actors Discuss Route to Stage

The audition process is fairly simple. You receive a script to borrow, pick a scene, and read in front of a panel of directors. Everyone is usually very nervous and stressed," senior Maria Bruno said, referring to Fall Play auditions.

After school began in early September, neophyte thespians prepared for a physically and emotionally demanding set of rehearsals and performances. Before partaking, however, each individual successfully went through a cold reading of foreign material in front of a group of formidable teachers. "Mrs. Jacobs can smell fear," junior Rachel Whitlinger said, who admitted to feeling overly excited before her turn to tryout. Ms. Filippone, who served as the stage crew manager during production said, "Nerves can keep a person's talents hidden. Some people are naturally funny, which is delightful to watch."

After receiving parts, the actors braced themselves for the times ahead. High hopes and audience reactions served as the final test, the bridge between whether they wasted their time or extreme assiduity paid off.

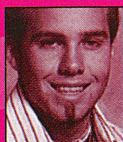

Belt it out...

With her nose high in the air, senior Julia Rozewicz sings her opera solo in the fall drama. She said, "Being sophisticated was difficult because I was one of the least sophisticated people you'll ever meet." Rozewicz further said that she will miss the time spent with her friends in the drama.

Getting ready to announce the next singer, senior Brett Badac performs in the fall play, The Bachelor King. Describing his own character, Badac said, "My character, Frederick Pilfer, is the personal advisor to the king. He is very sly and greedy." Badac had performed in many school productions before his starring role as Mr. Pilfer.

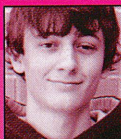

On guard...
Dressed as a guardian angel, junior Kerry Decker advises the new king on how to run the kingdom. "I never really acted in the drama before this year, but participating in this production has caused me to love the stage," said Decker. He also acted in Hometown Christmas at the Casino.

Naughty by nature...
Discussing her more than naughty nature, senior Dani Krivoski talks to King Yokel, played by senior Patrick Sylves. "I'm a gangsta, a straight up 'G', the gangsta life is the life for me," said Krivoski. She also performed in many plays at the Casino Theatre.

Jingle bells...

On live television, senior Larry Long rings the Salvation Army bell. "It was pretty chilly outside. The 'warm' hot chocolate didn't help, but it was tasty," said Long about the harsh conditions. Long stayed and helped with the telethon for all five days.

Holiday hype...

Outside of K-Mart, sophomore Jessica Barker and junior Ian Vergari report live on the Class Challenge totals to date. "I was simply saying that the juniors were the returning champs and could not be beat," said Vergari. The two enjoyed free hot dogs and hot chocolate at the event.

Good tidings...

With microphone in hand, senior Paddy Sylves interviews an elementary school student during the telethon. "I usually asked the kids their names, what they wanted for Christmas, and who they would like to wish a Merry Christmas to," said Sylves. Sylves helped at the telethon all five days on the air.

Let it snow, let it snow...

Just after eating three hot dogs, anchor senior Sean McWilliams hands the microphone to senior Nate Insko. McWilliams said, "We talked about snowboarding and how many faces we were going to 'butter on.'" McWilliams further said that Insko ate more hot dogs than he did--many more.

Big bucks...

Careful not to make a mistake, seniors Ryan Ridenour, Meg Mszyco, and Teal Smail count the donated money for the telethon. "We dealt with a lot of money that week. In theory, we touched thousands of dollars which was pretty sweet," said Mszyco. Mrs. Poleski and her Student Council organized and operated the event.

Generous Students Bundle Up to Give Bundles of Cash

"Is there a better way to spend an evening?" senior

Story by Josh Barszewski, 12

Meg Mszyco said, as coats zipped up, noses turned red, and cameras started rolling. Before long, students began to gather round the tech trailer, meander onto the telethon set, face the camera, and wish loved ones a Merry Christmas. A major fund raiser, the class challenge, pitted class against class in an effort to raise as much money as possible. "When we were not interviewing kids or raffling prizes, we had plenty of airtime to goof around! Game shows we made up on the spot were always a favorite; last year there was even an impromptu rap battle," junior Grace Evans said.

All sorts of games, bets, dares, and competitions took place; the winner of each earned money for his or her class. At the end of each night, and after days of good, clean competition that raised money, the cameraman flashed the sign out the trailer window informing those on air to "Wrap it up!" After the sign off, everyone rode off into the snowy, wintry evenings, knowing they helped the community.

Seven come eleven...
Playing the part of a gambler, senior Travis Charlton attempts to escape trouble for setting up a betting scheme. On playing a role in the musical, Travis said, "I had a blast in Guys and Dolls. Looking back, going out for the part was one of the best decisions I have ever made." Besides participating in school musicals, Charlton played full back for boys soccer.

Big attitude...

With her best Marilyn Monroe impression, senior Eileen Dudik gives attitude to the audience after receiving an insult. "My favorite memory was when Marissa Mechling and I would speak 'Ipton Skripton Maggot,'" said Dudik. Toward the end of the scene, Dudik escorted junior Marissa Mechling's elderly character off the stage.

lingo, and have a special love for a fire named Bob," senior Meghann Wygonik said. Although it may seem like some mechanic-worshipping cult, this described the students in the wings, who helped make the musical Guys and Dolls a hit. The audience focused on the performance of the leads, but did anyone notice who painted the amazingly realistic sewer backdrop?

This job and many others went to the guys and dolls in black. Behind the scenes of every show, the stage crew worked tirelessly building and coordinating the sets, often in an extremely hectic, rushed atmosphere. When the curtain fell, though, the end justified the means. "We loved to work behind the scenes in our slick black outfits. Our goal was always to create a perfect show, with every set in its place and no broken palm trees, because a perfect show equalled Dilly Bars from Mr. Ridgeway," senior Laura Beskitt said, "and yes- we sang and danced backstage- you just couldn't see!"

Horsing around...
With newspapers in hand, senior Travis Charlton, graduate Brad Lookabaugh, and junior Dane Farrell sing a trio song about who has the best racehorse. Farrell said, "I was willing to accept any part given to me, but I was extremely happy to have a minor lead." Farrell further said that he followed two very attractive ladies off the set at the end of the scene.

Sweet melodies...
Sporting a plaid dress, graduate Danielle Pugliese sings Bushel and a Peck with her back up of beauties. "My character allowed me to bring a light-hearted, fun-loving approach to the stage," said Pugliese. She enjoyed the chance to play an easy going character in Guys and Dolls, especially after playing such a prude in The Prince and the Pauper.

"I was told to put on lots of make-up but look like I had none on at all."
Kayla Robinson, 11

"I had to change from a girl to a guy so I had lipstick on as a guy."

On a mission...
With a look of disgust, junior Kerry Decker glares at Sky Masterson. "Everyone in the show performed fantastically; therefore, the show was a huge hit," said Decker. He played the part of Arvide, an elderly mission worker.

Money for nothing...
Graduates Chris Dunlay and Keith Hampshire show off their money to graduate Danielle Pugliese and senior Meagan Mszyczo. Hampshire said, "The show was a big success and I'll never forget anyone in it." Hampshire played Sky and Dunlay played Detroit.

Guys and Dolls

Mark time mark...

In perfect band formation, sophomore Katrina Lewewski marches through Vandergrift for the Homecoming Parade. "I'm at band so much, I hardly ever see my family," said a reflective Lewewski. The football team beat Hempfield by a score of 22-21 in an explosive last few minutes of the game.

Hand in hand...

Gathered in front of the flagpole on September 26, 2007, junior Billy Baker holds hands with sophomore Matt Miller for See You at the Pole. "Praying in front of the school with a lot of kids watching was kind of awkward but it was fun and I'm glad I did it," said Baker. See You at the Pole served as an event where Christian students and faculty alike could pray together.

Unhappy campers...

Infuriated by a bad call, senior Matt Pokusa gives the referee a piece of his mind. "I don't know why I look like a horse, but that ref didn't know how to do his job," said Pokusa. Later that evening, he had to wash his face nearly 15 times to get the paint out of his beard.

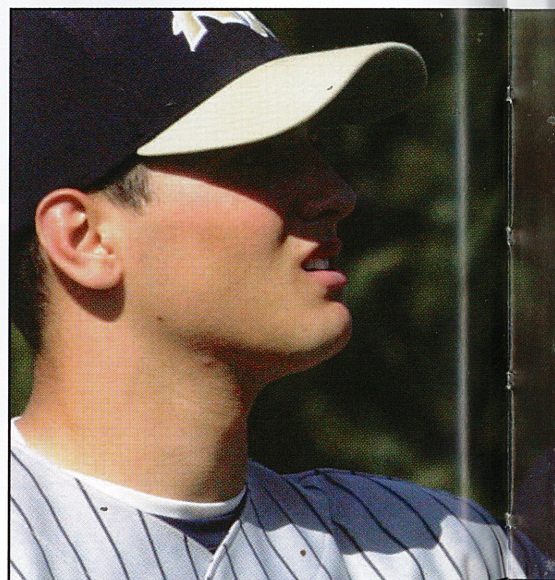

Balancing act...

With his eyes on the Hacky sack, junior Mike Hoculock kicks the sack to his friends during lunchtime. "Hacky sack is enjoyable because it takes skill and practice, and it's something to do with your friends," said Hoculock. The crew of sackers played each day outside, even in the rain.

Face the music...

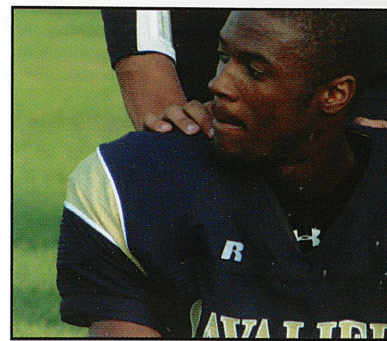

Covered in blue, senior Nate Rigatti keeps eyes on the field on a warm Friday night. "Before the game at the cookout, Bettina, Amy, and Ciara painted me and Mark up," said a spirited Rigatti. He and his buddies actually painted up for every home football game of the season.

Just in the nick of time...

Just before the start of the first spring game, senior Nick Caratelli loosens up his arm. Concerning the relations between the group of players, Caratelli said, "We grew not only as a team, but we became like a family." Caratelli planned to go to college and major in forest biology.

Mind over matter...
Wide receiver, senior James O'Quinn mentally prepares for battle against Canon Mac at home. "On the way to each contest, I listened to Throw It Up by Lil' Jon to get hype for the game," said O'Quinn. He hoped to continue playing ball for a Division I college on a full scholarship.

*My friends mean the

We tell each other everything and I would do anything for them.”

Brooke Churma, 9th

Dancing Stars

Hiding his face, senior Zach Forrest learns the dance for Sunny Side of the Street. "The best part about show choir performances is just being able to see new places with my friends." Prior to each practice and performance, Forrest and rest of the show choir sang scales to warm up their voices.

Fierce Fans...

Full of school spirit, a group of seniors cheer on the football team at Butler. When approached by Butler fans, senior Amy Antal said, "Sorry 'bout your football team." Towards the end of the game some of the group travelled to Butler's side of the stadium where police escorted them out.

"I'm not a big fan of public speaking, but I had so much fun out there," said Butler. She spoke at pep assemblies for both the varsity volleyball and varsity basketball teams.

Look ahead to the Future

Story by
Alex Nigra, 12

Graduates Contemplate Application Process

"Application fee: $50, stamps for ten applications: $43, pens: $5, white-out: $4, being done with college applications: priceless," senior Robert Iseman said to describe the major ordeal of applying to college. The time-consuming, yet often exciting, process of deciding on a college inevitably led to the painstaking process of actually completing applications. College-bound seniors completed countless biographies, activities lists, and worst of all, essays, on many sunny, carefree weekends in their quest for higher education. "What I really hated was when the essay told you to write about yourself, but everything you were going to say was already in the application," Iseman said.

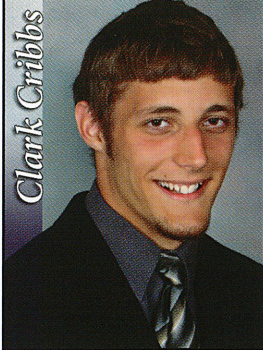

Staring at a computer screen for countless hours on end and the quick tapping of the backspace key became all too familiar sensory observations for those looking to secure a spot as a college freshman. While some seniors waited for the last minute to complete their applications, a few overachieving students made significant progress very early. "I started my applications in June after my dad called me and told me to start them," senior Chuck Moyes said.

Breakdance anyone?

In the middle of the Homecoming Dance, seniors Josh Vick and Bettina Vaccarello enjoy each other's company before bad karma swept over them both. "We had a great time until the big ogre threw me up into the air and forgot that I would come back down. I ended up breaking my third, fourth, and fifth metatarsals, not to mention my heart," jokingly said Vaccarello. She still danced the night away and didn't realize the severity of the injury until three days later.

Thing 1 or Thing 2?

To show seniors Jessica Kownacki and Teal Smail their picture, senior Maggie Land flips through pictures in the LCD monitor of her camera. "We needed almost 900 usable pictures for the first two deadlines alone. It was nuts," said Land. She and three other girls took all candid pictures for the 2008 Campus yearbook.

Road to Vick-tory

Story by
Courtney Grafton, 12

Stellar Senior Breaks Passing Record

"Invigorating...that is actually a great way to explain it," said senior Josh Vick, starting quarterback, regarding the most epic Friday night of his football career thus far. What began as a typical game became one extraordinary night under the lights of Historic Davis Field. Vick took the field, mentally and physically strong and focused. "I just got in the zone and just...played the game," said Vick. After completing many fantastic and awe-inspiring plays, the ball soared fatefully from his fingers and shattered the school record for most yards passed.

Varsity football fans and supporters alike considered this accomplishment a phenomenal achievement, since Vick had spent the greater portion of his junior season on one leg after an injury during the game against Penn Hills. "I was so disappointed that I couldn't help my team," said Vick, recalling his frustration from the sideline.

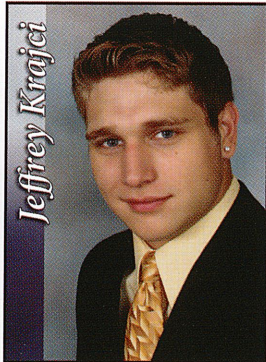

Though Vick focused on adding his name to the record book, he mainly played for the love of the game and the love of his team. After his days of glory, he planned to pursue his passion of football further at the University of Pittsburgh, Penn State, or Harvard.

Migraine madness

Story by
Josh Barszczewski, 12

Enrolled AP Students Contemplate Responsibilities

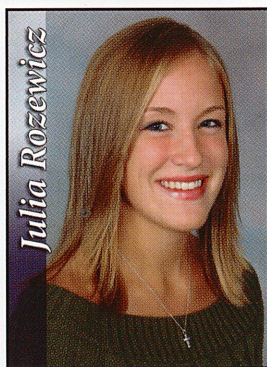

"I remember when I was taking a test in AP Spanish and the room was dead silent, the alarm on my watch started to beep and I didn't know how to stop it," senior Annie Loveless said, reflecting fretfully on her most horrific AP experience.

Students in every curriculum feared the mighty instructor's wrath, yet something as simple as an alarm clock interruption during a test brought on not just anger from the teacher, but from fellow students who did not have time to waste. AP classes consisted of hours of homework, grueling tests, and essays so complicated that migraine pills became better aids than the Internet. Still, the valiant students persevered, for the College Board-designed curriculums meant more than taking tests and gaining credit; they meant a chance to explore intellectually invigorating material not found anywhere else. Senior Courtney Grafton said, "When I sit myself down to take assorted exams and timed writings, I die a little on the inside, but I thrive on AP courses and wouldn't give them up for anything."

"Hopefully, we have started a trend that will lead to masses of people cheering on our runners," said Zach. The boys looked all over K-Mart for the right paint for the event.

Network Works Well

Story by
Susan Kessler, 11

Students Discover Alternative Expression Forums

"Facebook is clearly the most fantastically wonderful of the currently popular networking sites. It not only directs you to your own wall, photo comments, and messages - but you can see what your friends write to one another! It's a busybody's dream," senior Joshua Barszczewski said on the subject of networking sites. While some may think Barszczewski's answer irrationally passionate, those people seemed a minority, since at the beginning of the school year over 500 students and alumni belonged to the high school's network on Facebook. Additionally, over 1,516 students belonged to the same network on Myspace.

However, as with most trends, a widely hated side of networking sites surfaced as well. "I hate logging in and seeing messages from spammers, random bands with little or no talent, or invitations to concerts in other states," Barszczewski said on the downside of networking sites. Clearly, though, the good outweighed the bad with respect to this particular trend, as the sheer number of members within the student body proved.

Stirring Up Future Fears

Story by
Susan Kessler, 11

Juniors Find Time to Focus on Grades

"I really buckled down and took school more seriously, because this is the year that everyone says colleges really look at," junior Chelsea Young said in reference to the academic stress traditionally placed on college-bound juniors. Juniors had little to occupy themselves with but sweating at the thought of applying for college.

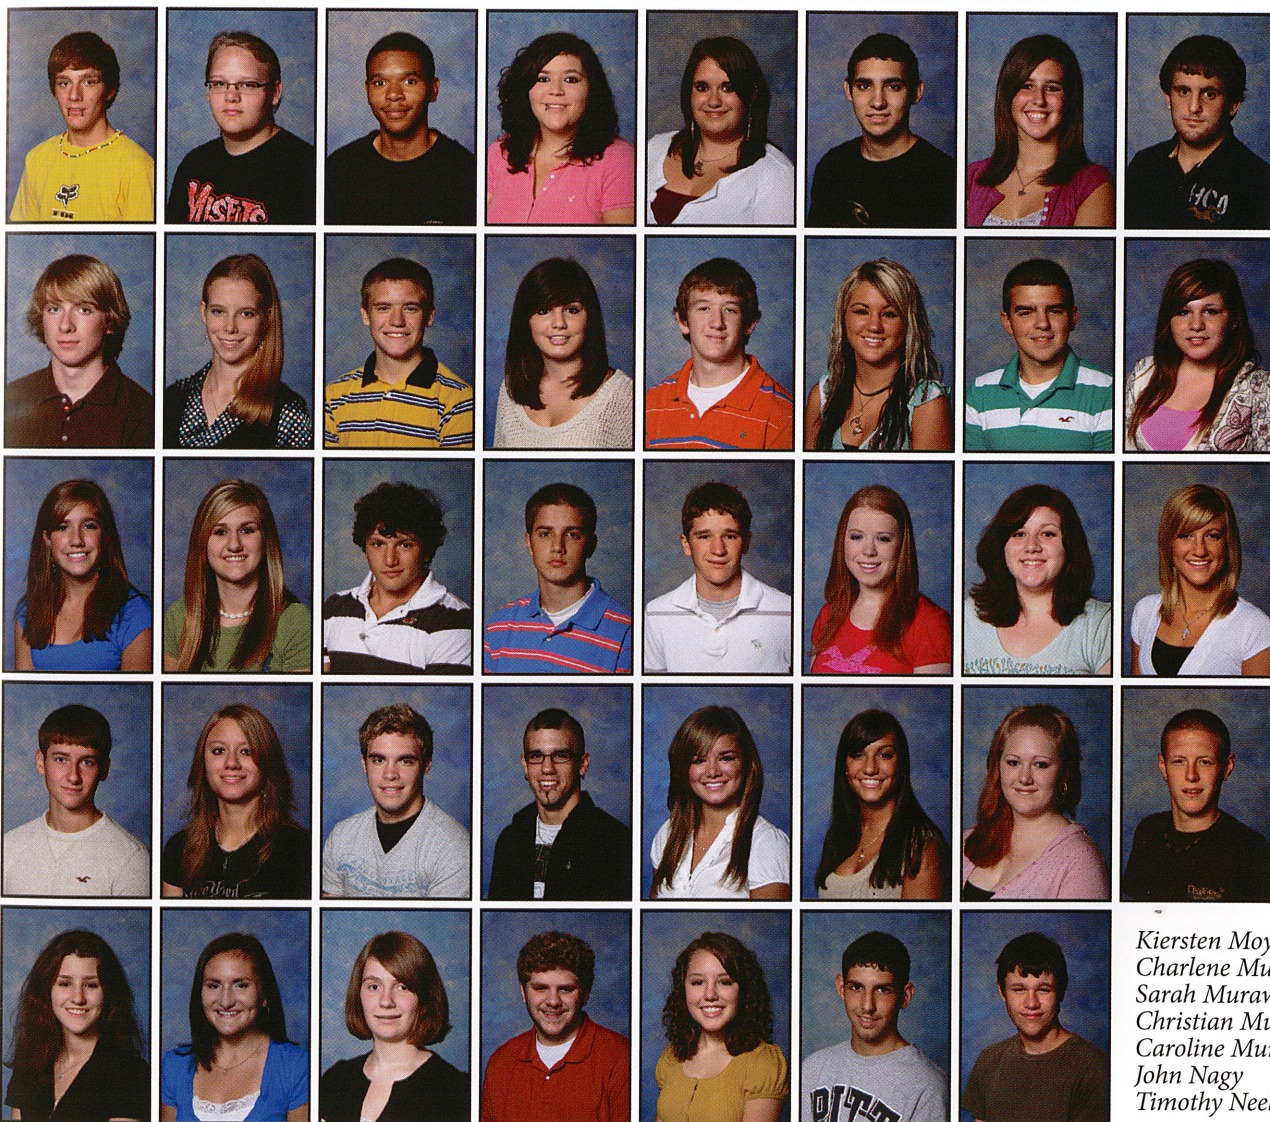

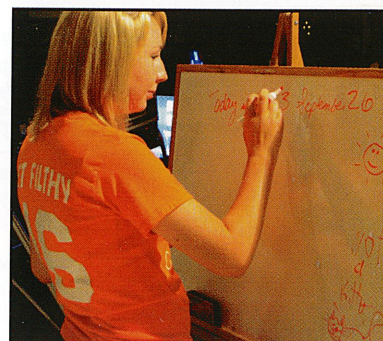

"It seems like every year teachers said that we shouldn't stress too much about grades, because we can still fix them, but this year it's like we're running out of time," Young said.

Luckily, though, ample opportunities for schadenfreude arose. "I would feel really stressed out and put upon with my workload, but then I'd see seniors working on college applications, and feel better, even though I knew I would be doing that next year," junior Kiersten Moyes said about just such an opportunity.

Overall, the junior class got through the year, and as seniors, they will smile maliciously at the squirming juniors next year.

Board to death...
In the valuable minutes before school starts, junior Grace Evans prepares the makeshift teleprompter for Good Morning Kiski. "GMK can be pretty crazy before we go on the air; we are sometimes rushing just to be in our seats when it's time to start," said Evans. She and her friends found humor in the minor mistakes that the anchors made daily.

Spirit for Driving

Story by
Josh Barszczewski, 12

Sophomores Take the Wheel

"My first driving experience was fun because I knew exactly what to do," sophomore Frank Ross said. During their sophomore year, a plethora of students buckled their seat belts and sat through one of the most feared examinations known to human kind: the driver's license test. However, getting to that horrific day required a minimum of six months practice; and, for many students, private lessons with a tutor. Even public education paved the way for some with school day classes of Drivers' Ed with Mrs. McAfee.

Sophomore Bryan Moore said, "I drove home whenever I got my permit. Now, I drive everyday.

The worst is driving in heavy rain."

For many students, receiving a driver's permit or license signified a rite of passage. Sophomore Colin Martin said, "The first time I drove, I realized that my adult life was beginning. To be entrusted with such responsibility is both scary and exhilarating."

Time to party...
To decorate the atrium in Spanish style for the Dia de la Raza, sophomores Patrick Wilkinson and Ben Doyle tie balloons to the stairwell railing. "It was very interesting to see how cultural all the dances were," said Wilkinson. He had Spanish IV all year with Mrs. Love in room 102.

Cut to the chase...

Careful not to cut himself, sophomore Devon Oblack shapes a post for the house he had to build in his Structures and Design class with Mr. Best. "It took us a full nine weeks to construct the house," said Oblack. He earned a 95% on the project for his efforts.

No pain, no gain...

Immediately after running a 5K race, sophomore Brynn Aljoe tries to catch her breath. "The worst thing you can do after a race is to fall over, yet, I find myself doing that time after time," said Aljoe. She got up and walked a zig-zag pattern over to the water jug.

Rolling in dough...

With intent precision, junior Eric Dominguez creams together butter and sugar to make chocolate chip cookies. "Learn from your past mistakes and you will become a better person," said Dominguez earnestly. He further said that he ended up getting chocolate all over his white coat.

BMX queen...

In front of the pack, sophomore Lindsay McCracken rounds turn two at South Park BMX track. "I've ridden since I was 14 and have worked my way up to the top, both locally and in the state," said McCracken. Due to an unfortunate mishap, she placed third out of six in this race, Stars and Stripes National.

Ready for Success

Story by
Alex Nigra, 12

Freshman Transition not Without Roadblocks

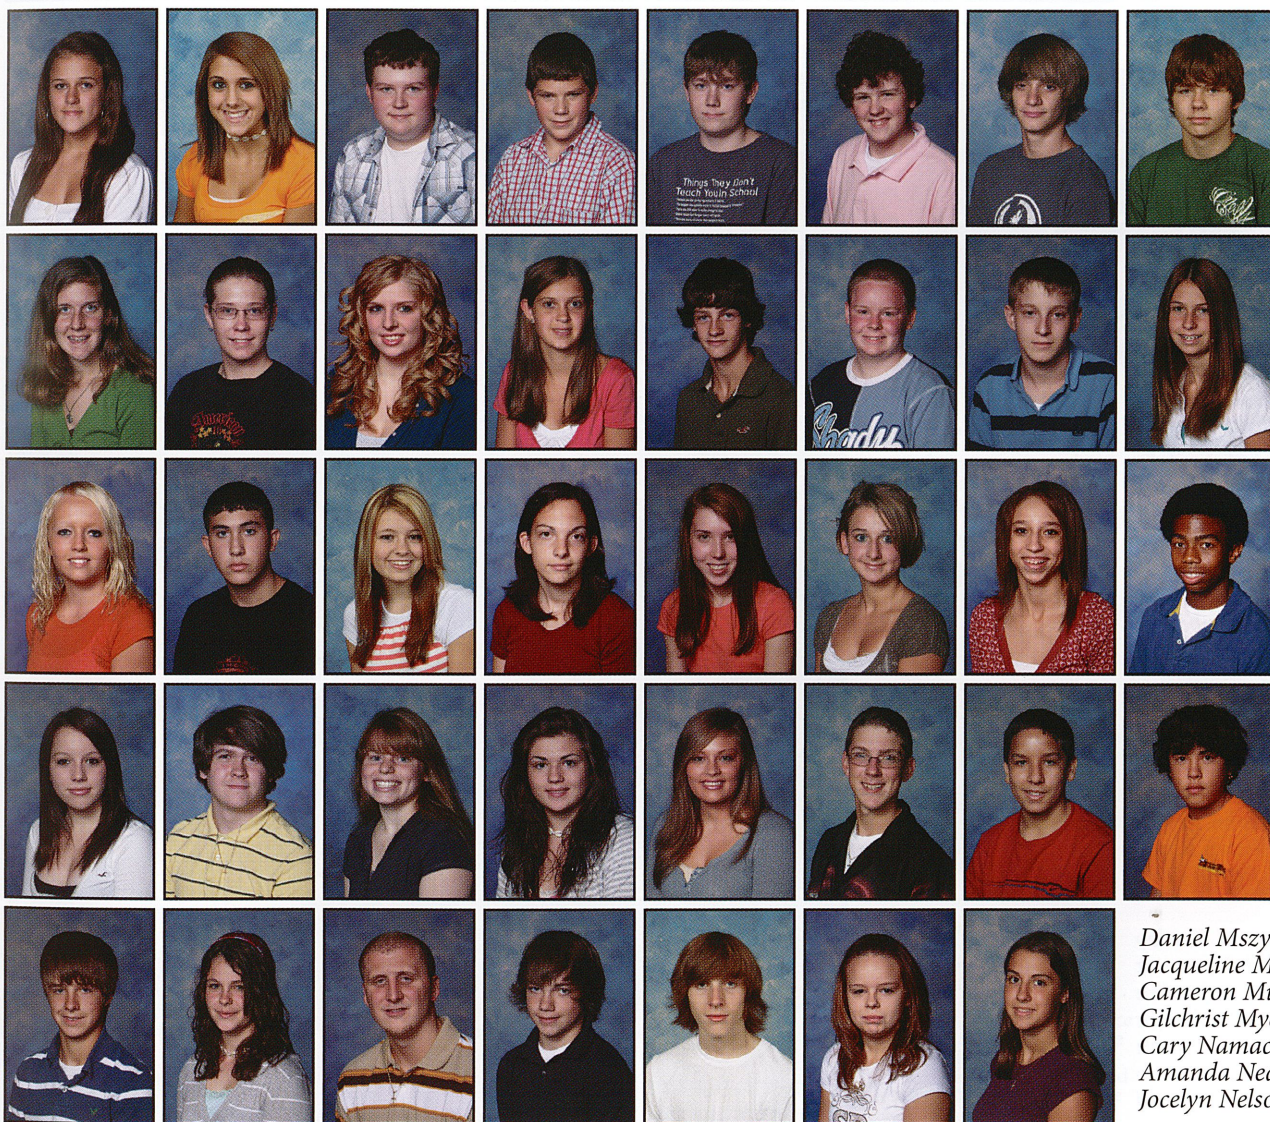

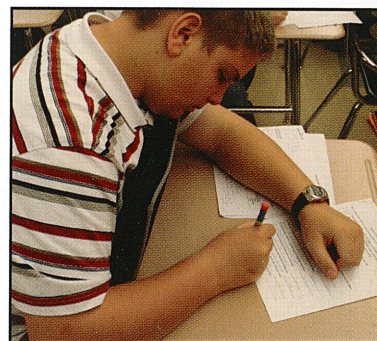

The experience of freshman year at the high school varied greatly from student to student. Some would fondly recall that year as one of increased independence while others would remember the overwhelming feeling of first trying to navigate the labyrinth of hallways that make up the high school.

Regardless of the experience, moving from the intermediate school to the high school played an important role in one's life.

Upon first entering the high school, freshmen had the difficult assignment of navigating the halls through massive traffic jams. "The school needs bigger doorways," freshman Matt

Wygonik said regarding the cause of such slowdowns. Apparently, the traditional stereotype of upperclassmen elitist attitudes toward freshmen held little basis in reality. "Only the upperclassmen we know are the ones who make fun of the fact that we are freshman; no one else seems to care," Wygonik said.

Grammar guy?
Sweating over a test in Ms. Danka's Academic English class, freshman Victor Cardamone tries to decipher sentence structure. He said, "What in the world is a complex sentence?" He took the test in room 215 during first period on Thursday, November 1.

A new view...

To gain a unique perspective, junior Kristen Engler lies on the atrium floor to sketch some of its architecture. "For our project, we had to find interesting views of the atrium that most students overlooked," said Engler. She has enjoyed art since she attended first grade art class with Mrs. Shaner.

Stick to it...

Deep in concentration, senior Zach Stickle takes a Math Team test. Commenting on the class with the hardest tests, Stickle said, "AP Chem from last year. Of course, I have a bad feeling about AP Physics this year." Stickle got 3 out of 5 on that Math Team test.

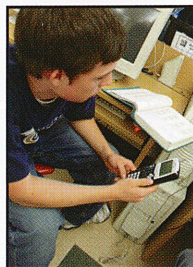

Feel the burn...

In an AP Biology class lab, senior Adam Wood measures out the correct amount of hydrochloric acid. Wood said, "My lab partner was Tony Clark. He was a pretty good student, but I did most of the work. He messed up a lot." Wood claimed that in this particular lab, the mixture exploded because Tony got the measurements wrong.

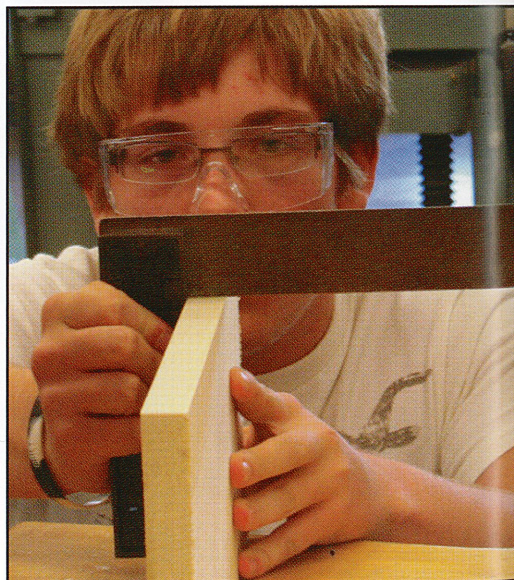

Sing, sing, sing...

Attempting to keep their voices on key, freshmen Kylie Jackson, Kalyn Polke, and Kelsie Thompson sing during choir. "Last year's Christmas songs were my favorite," said Jackson. She preferred high school choir over intermediate school choir.

Trusty TI...

After hooking his graphing calculator up to the computer, junior Chris Nida graphs equations. "Pre-Calc was a tough class, but Mrs. Schaeffer sometimes let us work in groups, which made it easier," said Nida. He traveled to room 310 during second period for his daily dose of mathematics.

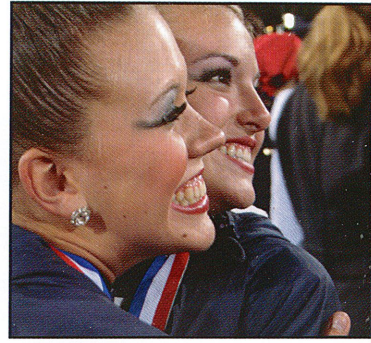

Measuring up...

Precisely measuring a piece of wood in manufacturing class, junior Chris Johnson uses a cross cut to make a perfect square. Jokingly, Johnson said, "Being square is just the start." Johnson liked manufacturing because he valued hands-on experience with his work.

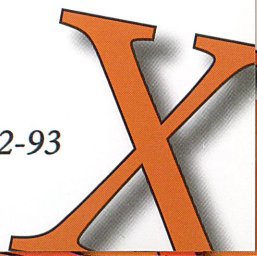

Look of champions...

Elated about the win at Towson, senior Tracey Hilty and junior Beka Aber show their emotion after the band won first place. "Nothing could describe the feeling we had, not even the biggest smile," Hilty sincerely said. After all the excitement, Hilty went to learn the "Thriller" dance, made popular by Michael Jackson, from the Towson band.

*I've learned that you

Appropriate precautions...
After he received word from the other principals, Mr. McClarnon calls the student body back into the school after a successful October fire drill. "We take these drills seriously. Hopefully, we will never have to experience the real thing," said McClarnon. Mr. McClarnon conducted fire drills regularly to assure that all school students could exit safely.

Careful to meet the needs of all teachers in the school, Mr. Gonnella confirms a coverage for a teacher that needed to leave to coach his team. "I always did my best to cover teachers who had to leave the classroom because they were involved in students' lives outside the classroom," said Mr. Gonnella. Mr. G. also handled most of the discipline problems in the high school.

What's the password?
To start his day early in the morning, Mr. Soles logs into his laptop computer. "The computer has become more important to me since my partner puts Post-It's all over his," said Soles. Prior to the 2007-2008 school year, Mr. Soles served as principal at Deer Lakes High School.

Commander in chief...
During an in service before the start of the school year, Superintendent Dr. John Meighan playfully inspires his staff to enjoy another year in the district. On how Dr. Meighan spends his summer, his daughter Jenny, said, "Dad usually spent most the summer preparing for the next year or going to basketball games to watch my sister Celena play." The Meighans resided in Avonmore and had two dogs named Hercules and Harmony.

New Principal Smoothly Transitions

"To be honest, I have never heard of Mr. Soles. He's probably pretty cool. What happened to Mr. McClarnon?" senior Joshua Barszczewski said when asked about new principal, Mr. Soles. Contrary to what evidently passed for common knowledge, a new principal came to the school this year. Also, contrary to Barszczewski's belief, he did not replace Mr. McClarnon, but rather Mr. Koter, who went to the Intermediate School as principal.

"Mr. Soles looks kind of like...you know...those Asian guys...Buddha! He looks like Buddha. That's so cool!"

junior Kiersten Moyes said, when faced with a picture of him.

Still, some people had heard of Mr. Soles. "Mr. Soles is amazing. He came to visit me yesterday during dinner," junior Kerry Decker said. Then, after some reflection, "Oh, you mean the Principal? I thought you were talking about my neighbor! I've never heard of him," Decker added.

By the end of the year, all students welcomed Mr. Soles in what probably became the smoothest and most fitting transition in administration ever to hit the high school.

Counselors Guide Troubled Seniors

Story by Courtney
Grafton, 12

Down the hall and across the atrium there lived a quaint little enigma of offices, tucked away in the bustling community of the school. Unless one entered this separate little world, he would never know that the business of this place equalled, if not surpassed, the most crowded hallway junction. Herein lay the world of the Guidance Office.

When crossing the threshold of the office, one encountered a billboard constantly plastered with scholarship and financial aid opportunities, there for the taking by any interested student. The guidance counselors waited in their offices for any student entering to beseech help. These four diligent counselors not only provided encouragement, sparked ideas, inspired ambitions, but also filed lots of tedious paperwork, sent transcripts to schools, and wrote letter after letter of recommendation. "My counselor gave me this giant, mondo-sized financial aid packet full of web sites and all kinds of college craziness. I would not be able to keep it all straight without them," senior Laura Beskitt said. The guidance office made the prospect of college much less terrifying for graduating seniors.

Offering advice to juniors for applying to college, Manganello said, "Gather your applications early and get them in as soon as you can." She handled students whose last names started with "L" and ended with "R."

Near the end of a late December Friday, Mrs. Feeney clarifies a student's excuse blank for Mrs. Hurley. On her least favorite job task, Mrs. Feeney said, "I run about 6000 copies a day and it takes up a huge amount of my time." Mrs. Feeney's daughter, Brenna, belonged to the Class of 08.

Careful to stay on the white line, members of the colorguard high-step forward for their pregame performance at a football game. "The high-stepping was not easy to do in the mud and rain. We all usually ended up laughing hysterically at it," said junior Kayla Stull. Before each game, the band and guard paraded through Vandergrift to play for the local community.

Doing their research, juniors Jen Zatko and Frank Brank look up information on school uniforms. "The laptops were frustrating, but you eventually got the research you needed if you were patient," said Zatko of the computer's speed. Zatko and Brank argued that school officials should enforce school uniforms.

With her partner, sophomore Steve Bumbarger, junior Susan Kessler dances to Sunny Side of the Street. Kessler jokingly said, "It was a little imposing dancing with a charmer like Steve." Besides performing in school show choir, Kessler acted in the Christmas show at the Casino Theatre in Vandergrift.

Senior Research Benefits and Stresses

As seniors made their way through their final year of high school, they all had to face one huge hurdle in the form of the senior research paper. Choosing an interesting topic often became one of the most difficult parts of the project. "I chose my topic with the help of my mentor and personal experiences. It was something that interested me and would also benefit my career choice for college," senior Kristina Hendrick said in reference to her systematic approach for topic-selection.

Each students feared specific parts of the research process, and some could not even decide on one in particular. "The worst part about the research paper was the extreme amount of time and effort it entailed, or the whole thing, or Mr. Berzonsky terrifying you about failing because of plagiarism," senior Rob Iseman said.

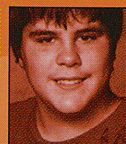

Though the paper often caused much stress, most students agreed to its ultimate worth. "I will benefit from doing the paper by knowing the process for writing a research paper in college," said Hendrick.

Story by

"Anxiety? Absolutely! No joke, I couldn't stand still," said senior Sammi Aiello of the Marching Band, about their unforgettable victory at the BOA Regional in Towson, MD. With all eyes upon them, the band took the field with a synchronized vengeance. While maintaining fearsome, stoic expressions of focus on the outside, the gears in their heads churned with fury. The regiment set up "the heart" and awaited their cue, striving to uphold their composure in the intensity of the moment. After time had seemingly halted, the band struck their first pose, and so the fateful show commenced.

A short time later, the band found themselves back on the field for finalists' retreat. Trepidation rose to an ultimate high as only two bands remained in the top two: Kiski and their rival, Norwin. "I heard some random woman scream 'We love you Westmoreland County!'" said Aiello. One could taste the bitter rivalry. Then the thundering voice announced Kiski as the Regional Champions. As if responding to a magnetic pull, the entire group drew together in a blissful, tearful embrace.

Biology Goes Beyond Books

"My most horrific lab experience would be when I spilled chemicals. Oops! It was an accident, but my partner would not let me touch anything acidic ever again," senior Nicole McMahon said, referring to the infamously complex AP Biology labs. From testing the effects of enzymes to recognizing the phases of mitosis in onion root cells, the long and exhilarating experiments received mixed reactions: excitement from future Bio majors, fear and panic from everyone else. "Although the labs were difficult, they were interesting and went further in-depth than the textbook chapters," senior Bettina Vaccarello said.

Ultimately, the students rose to the challenge, gaining study practices and analytical skills necessary to make it through the nearly three hour-long AP examinations. They also provided the burgeoning scholars with an introduction to college level science courses. As always, the students received assistance from the master-of-all-that-is-science, Mr. David Voytek. Auto Mechanics Adjust to Adversity

Story by
Alex Nigra, 12

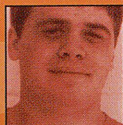

While some students fretted about getting mud on their shoes while walking outside between classes, a select few immersed themselves elbow deep in oil and grease, and they loved it. These inspired individuals attended the Vo-tech program in auto mechanics everyday in hopes of eventually pursuing a career in a related field. Each day consisted of learning how to maintain and repair various parts of automobile, including engines, clutches, transmissions, axles, cooling, and brake systems. "Everything is different and challenging," senior Jim Gardone said when discussing why he enjoyed the auto mechanics program.

In addition to learning how to care for an automobile, auto mechanic students learned how to think on their feet, as everything did not always go as planned. When a part on an engine or automobile broke, the students held the responsibility of identifying the part and deciding how to repair it. Most students planned to further their experience in the field after high school. When asked about his post-graduation plans, Gardone said, "To attend CCAC for auto mechanics."

Brothers also said that she really disliked the tests in the class because they seemed too difficult.

Pool Remains Infamous Gym Activity

"I actually liked pool class. I mean, who didn't enjoy the fact of getting in a freezing cold pool in the middle of winter with random hair and band aids floating around and swimming laps in a pool with way too much chlorine? So, what's not to love? ...Everything," sophomore Fawn Armagost said while reminiscing about the infamous pool class. It appeared as if there stood no middle ground when talking about pool class; students either loved or hated suiting up and jumping in every third day for nine weeks of their freshman, sophomore, and junior years.

For those rare few who absolutely loved getting all wet in the middle of their days for forty-three minutes, pool class proved a splash. Almost any boy around school acknowledged water polo as their favorite pool activity. "I hated finding and having to pull out other people's hair from the swim caps," junior Maria Scheller said. Other complaints included walking into the next class with goggle and swim cap marks, as well as the obvious wet hair.

Special Choirs Make Their Mark

Story by
Meg Mszyco, 12

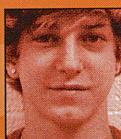

"No matter what our backgrounds were or where we were from, the music is what mattered," senior Katlin George said of her county chorus experience. As students from all over the county came together at Kiski Area High School, an air of unity between all chorale members resonated in each of their voices. As the singers sat with their music, next to people they had never even met, friendships blossomed quickly as they shared a musical experience like no other. "There was nothing like meeting brand new people who have the same interests as you," junior Joe Chiodo said. "Music has a power that brings people closer together."

This trend proved true within the show choirs also. The show choirs trooped to numerous venues together, including nursing homes, church benefits and other community festivals. Whether the steadfast choir performed in the cold winter air at light up night, or for three performances in a row, the members never ceased their passion for the group and for coming together to make incredible music.

Masons Lay Future Foundations

"The hardest thing is making sure everything is plumb and straightedge," senior Nathan Rigatti said, showing off his masonry jargon from Vo-tech. While for most students Vo-tech conjured up images of disembodied mannequin heads, or fluffy muffin-esque chef hats, for those enrolled in the masonry program, fine white dust and bricks felt like home. "It's kind of symbolic, it's like shaping the earth and laying down a foundation, I guess," Rigatti said, philosophically. Similar to Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin laying down the foundation for the United States, the Masons continue to quietly and subtly influence and build society even today. They build the establishments that everyone uses daily, not even considering those who control the structure. The meticulous measurements and heavy lifting of masonry would most likely have frightened away most students, but the proud few who took up the call experienced the joy of knowing that the structures of tomorrow rested in their power, and the world would feel remorse for any taunting these masons had endured.

No single solution...
As he reads students' opinions, Mr. Lohr thinks about solutions to common societal problems. "No solutions are easy, but you can't simply ignore the problems. You have to engage and really think, talk, and act for solutions. This doesn't come from books. People take the knowledge and come alive," said Mr. Lohr. He further said that everyone should just go and play their Xbox 720's and Playstation 14's.

Amend your ways...
With Mrs. Deal's help, freshman Kody Kurkowski works on a history assignment. "My favorite topic was the amendments because they related to everyone," said Kurkowski. He enjoyed History class with Mr. Snedecor and also Biology class with Mr. Guzzie.

Jack of all trades...
"Turkeyleg" and "Sugarfoot," more commonly known as Micah and Noah, sit on their dad, Mr. Lohr at Trax Pumpkin Farm. "Right after this shot, we did the pumpkin toss. It is a part of their Olympic training, provided that they add the pumpkin toss as an Olympic sport. Sharon and I can only hope," said Lohr. He recognized his wife, Sharon, as the best wife and mother in the universe.

Under the Friday night lights at Davis Field, alumni Joe Stone and Melissa Schaeffer become inducted into the Kiski Area Sports Hall of Fame. "Being inducted was a tremendous honor. It brought back so many good memories of running in high school and college," said Mrs. Schaeffer. In high school, Schaeffer ran the 300m hurdles, 100m hurdles, 4 by 400m relay, 4 by 1600m relay, and received honors as four-time county champion, four-time WPIAL placeholder, and two-time state medalist.

Spanish Projects Spice Up Learning

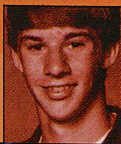

"Me encanta la clase de español," sophomore Ben Doyle said. When students entered through the doorway of their Spanish classroom, they crossed the threshold into a foreign land. They completed a series of projects throughout their years that transported them into the culture of a Spanish-speaking nation. Most assignments involved speaking to the group, using phrases that could come in handy whenever one found himself south of the border or beyond. From telling directions, to giving instructions on how to make PB&J, they wove a tapestry of language that soared above the heads of any non-polyglot.

In addition to honing their speaking skills, the Spanish classes became engrossed in Spanish culture, studying art, poetry, and literature, of course, en Español. "My favorite project was the Spanish art project in Fourth year," senior Sydney Martier said. "I loved the artist Goya, especially his painting, Saturno Comiendo Su Hijo, which is 'Saturn Eats His Son' Spanish art can be very interesting, despite the whole writing a research paper aspect."

Cooks Concoct Tasty Confections

Story by Josh Barszewski, 12

"The perfect day at Vo-Tech is when everything goes just right, the food just fits, and in the end you can be pleased with what you have done," senior Scott Slagle said. In an age when most students grumbled and groaned about insipid coursework, students in the culinary department at Vo-Tech considered themselves conscientiously content cooks and confectioners. Some joined the program because of a sheer love of preparing food, whereas others hoped to turn their enormous talents into promising careers. "I wanted to own my own restaurant," junior Eric Dominguez said.

In addition to the exceptional preparation for future employment Vo-Tech offered, the culinary students expressed extreme enthusiasm over the chance to create their favorite foods. Popular foodstuffs included pasta, bread, soup, and deliciously sweet treats. Slagle said, "I love food, but I love to bake cakes."

Perhaps the sweetest thing of all existed not in doughy, sugary treats, but in the passion Vo-Tech aroused in some people. Dominguez said, "I love to cook each day until my hand cramps."

Fall into line...
To allow her students to discover the efficiency of assembly lines, Miss Burlikowski has her class create origami. "The students found out that creating origami using the assembly line was much faster than doing all the folds individually," said Burlikowski. The assignment focused on Henry Ford and his brilliance to invent the amazing assembly line.

Pass it on...
As quickly as possible, sophomore Brandon Griffith hands paper to his fellow assembly line worker, sophomore Jeremy Sparks. "Practicing the assembly line was fun and it was a good break from our notes," said Griffith. The assembly line experiment only took a few minutes to accomplish, but it proved that an assembly line produces more items than a single individual can.

Interactive Lesson Engages Students

When reflecting on past history courses, tedious note taking, the entrancing light and fan of the overhead, and monotone lecturing voices often came to mind. However, if one would ask the students in Ms. Burlikowski's U.S. History II classes the same question, he or she would receive a very different answer. Known for her creative projects and in-class assignments, Ms. Burlikowski developed a fresh and interesting lesson to teach aspects of the assembly line.

"The purpose of the lesson was to show how an assembly line operates, and its benefits," said Ms. Burlikowski.

The US II assembly line consisted of several students in a row performing one action to create an origami fox. One side of the room worked as an assembly line and one side worked as individual workers for a set amount of time. "If the activity is hands on the students will be more willing to participate and the lesson will be more ingrained in their minds," said Ms. "B" pertaining to her interactive teaching method.

October Carves Out Fall Fun

Halloween Joyous, Not Frightening

Story by
Nicole Tittler,
12

"We always have a real pumpkin," said Mrs. Leezer, the Life Skills teacher, while thinking of her students' annual Halloween celebration. Each year the class asked a Buddy to select one of the drawings the students designed for the pumpkin's face. Then the Buddy would carve the pumpkin. The class then held a competition to win their beautiful pumpkin. The students put a paper plate on their head and used an orange crayon to draw a pumpkin and a black crayon to draw the face. The favorite drawing took home the carved pumpkin.

As well as the pumpkin fun, the class played games and had Halloween snacks. The students dressed up as well. The class contained a ghost, angel, monk, cowgirl, soldier, and skeleton. "My students enjoyed seeing all the costumes of the other students between periods and during lunch," said Mrs. Leezer remembering the other students of the school. The Life Skills students especially enjoyed having their picture taken with Mr. Gonnella, a priest. The Life Skills classroom took a day away from their routine to enjoy Halloween celebrations.

Really Awfully Bad Hair Days

Cuts Cut Too Deeply

"Oh, I've had some bad haircuts. Especially back in kindergarten," said senior Erika Harnish, cringing at the thought of a style gone wrong. Scissors snipped, steam rose from scorching hot rollers, and brushes coated in thick, gooey color swiped back and forth. Cosmetology study offered the incredible opportunity to add beauty and flair to any hair, but it also could have potentially created a cosmetic catastrophe.

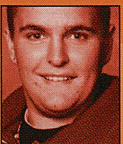

These artistic entrepreneurs had to begin their practice with hands-on experience, so they eventually moved from the mannequin heads to testing their talents on the heads of each other. While the students executed countless cuts and styles successfully, many ended in disaster. "My hair was supposed to be a purplish-brown shade, but my roots came out fire-engine red," said senior Autumn Boop, recalling her worst encounter with a coloring mistake.

Velcro rollers often got tangled in hair and sometimes too many treasured locks drifted away to the floor, but the students of Vo-tech's cosmetology program learned some of their most valuable lessons from their mistakes.

Proficient Workers Quietly Prepare School Scene

Story by

Imagine cleaning hazardous waste from the heating system, or preparing hundreds of lunches everyday. Sound appetizing? These jobs go to the behind-the-scenes maintenance and lunch staff. You may not see them at work, but you definitely feel, hear, see, taste, and smell the results every day. What kind of empty, hollow lives would we lead without Krazy Dipper Day? What if no one cleaned all the dead leaves out of the hallway outside the Lower Cafeteria? Suffice to say, no one really wants to experience the answers, and the staff work hard to keep those “what ifs” from becoming reality.

“My favorite food to prepare is the chicken salad,” said cafeteria worker Glenna Lubik. “It’s just an easy meal to do.” Working hard in the kitchen, that meal day came as a welcome relief. Meanwhile, the dirty work gets done. “The worst thing to clean is vomit... vomit that’s been sitting there all day,” said custodian Duane Lizik. When asked to describe the process, he said only, “you don’t want to know.” These backstage men and women deserve everyone’s recognition for all they do.

Jump for joy...

Just before she hits the sand pit, sophomore Tori Brungo does her best to stretch out another inch. "To better my jumps, I lifted weights and tried to perfect my steps," said Brungo. In addition to track and field, she competed on the diving team.

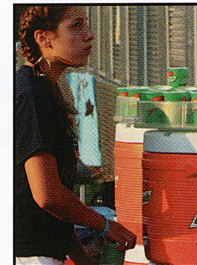

Battle of the "ballge"...

Going for possession of the ball, junior Dylan Freeman gives his all to ditch the opposing player from Franklin Regional. "In the off-season, I try to run at least four or five days," said Freeman. He also simply enjoyed hanging out with his friends when not competing on the soccer field.

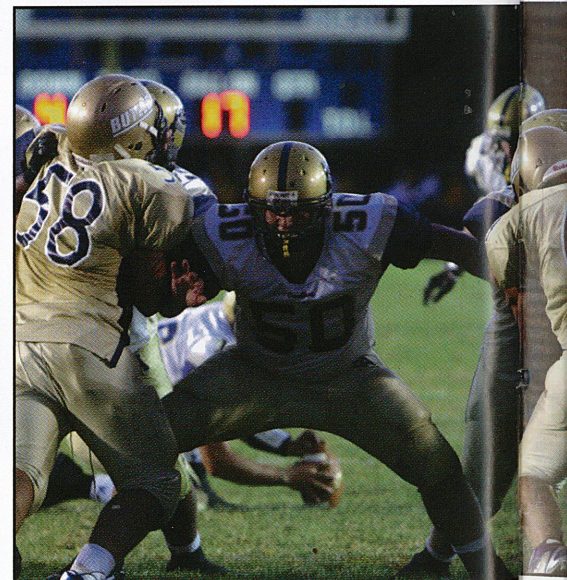

Go the distance...

Well into the cross country race, junior Tyler Keibler and senior Brett Badac sprint along the fence that surrounds the track. Badac said, "I run because it keeps me in shape and pushes me to the limit." The team placed first in this dual meet versus Woodland Hills and McKeesport.

Tall drink of water...

Prior to the home football game against Canon Mac, senior Justina Cerra prepares water for the team. "I liked being able to see each game from the sidelines, but the boys smelled pretty bad," said Cerra. She and many other trainers spent part of nearly every day in the training room helping injured athletes recover from their injuries.

Road block...

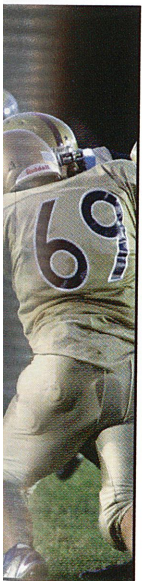

At an away game at Butler High School, senior center Ryan Ridenour splits the defensive line in two. "Our biggest priority was to protect Josh and let him do what he needed to do," said Ridenour. Mid season, Ridenour tore his ACL at an away game versus the Fox Chapel Foxes.

Fancy feet...
In a home game versus Plum,
senior Kristina Hendrick

The girls annihilated the

He replaced senior Ryan Ridenour after he had an ACL injury in the game against Fox Chapel.

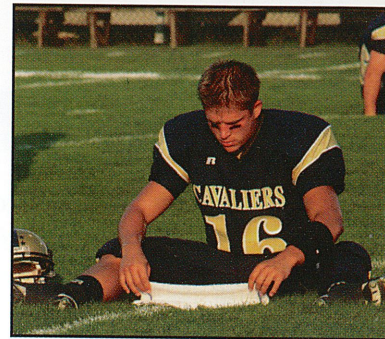

Hold the cheese please...

In attempt to ditch 5 defenders, junior Bret Gunn rushes the ball toward the endzone. "I held onto the ball as hard as I could. No Big Mac cheeseburger was going to strip the ball from me," said Gunn. He played running back and safety for the team.

No sweat...

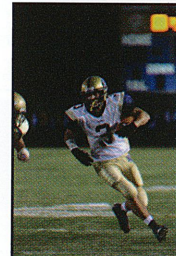

Just prior to a battle versus Canon Mac at home, senior quarterback Josh Vick folds his butterfly towel that he uses to dry his hands during the game. Vick said, "Home games were the best because we fed off the Davis Field crowd." He eventually broke the all-time passing record for the high school in a home game against Hempfield.

Team Endures Stringent Regiment at UPJ

"To wake up at six o'clock in the morning, coaches came around, blew whistles, and pounded on the doors," senior Zak Murdock said pertaining to the unpleasant wake up that greeted the football players every morning at the University of Pittsburgh Johnstown camp. For one week in the summer, the football players traveled to Johnstown for the most intense practices all year.

A typical day consisted of waking in the wee hours of the morning, struggling through three exhausting practices, and falling to sleep completely drained. "One of the worst parts was walking a mile to the field on the way out, and coming back uphill after practice," said Murdock.

Though most athletes agreed that the food tasted good, they could not eat much for fear of getting sick. "However, we ate everything the last day," senior Christian Hartford said. Each of the coaches possessed a distinct personality, earning them humorous "Spice Girl" nicknames, such as "Scary Spice" for Mr. Wilson, and "Story Spice" for Mr. Tursky. Regardless, camp spiced up the players and prepared the team for the season.

Slap Shot Late Nights

Troubling Transportation Does Not Demoralize

"It was unfortunate that I had to pay for gas. It would have been nice to have a bus to take us to away games," senior Vince Labriola said. Unlike the band or other privileged sports teams, hockey players did not receive transportation to and from games. To compound this unfortunate dilemma even further, the hockey team often played away games at locations much further away than the other sports teams. As such, the players often had to spend many late nights in distant places, sometimes staying out until 11:30 or even midnight. Some students carpooled, some had their parents drive, and still others took it upon themselves to make the tiring odyssey.

This did not stump the committed players however, as they enjoyed the experience immensely. On one memorable occasion, officials threw a goalie from the opposing team out for attacking other players. As it turned out, his replacement actually held more skill. "Hockey's a good time. It was not all about winning, as long as you were having fun," said Labriola.

Sweet treats...
With ease, senior Alex Nigra crushes a forehand shot back to his opponent. "Concentration is key with the forehand. Breaking it can launch the ball over the fences, which often results in automobile damage," said Nigra. He especially enjoyed time spent with Dr. Pipman because she incorporated ice cream and cookies into practice.

In the cone zone...
At an early fall practice, senior Laura Beskitt hits a regular ground stroke. "Mr. A. puts up cones for us to hit in our ground stroke drills. I think I might have hit one for the first time in my life," said Beskitt. She really liked the "Spiders and Snakes" drill as well.

Back to basics...
In mid-match against Fox Chapel, sophomore Danielle Dulick returns a serve with her backhand. On playing, Dulick said, "Watch the ball, and get into position to hit the ball." The girls team won the match that day.

Grunt Out Winners

Intensity Intimidates Opponents

Story by

Wygonik, 12

"I was playing an opponent I didn't like at Woodland Hills, and she was beating me horribly. My anger built up so I started hitting the ball harder and harder," said senior Laura Beskitt. However, Laura failed to mention the sounds and facial expressions that went hand in hand with the hard hits. At first glance, the ladies of the girls tennis team appeared a fun loving group of girls, but behind the spotless white uniforms stood a group of intense athletes. On the court the girls grunted and groaned with each swing of the racket. "You can psyche out the other players and motivate yourself," said Laura. The harder the hit, the worse the facial expression and the louder the sound. Apparently, the method proved successful, as the girls finished their season with a winning record.

The boys team also did their very best to frighten away their competition. "The team was amazing because I was on the team and I was amazing," senior Matt Yandura said jokingly in reference to the team's success. From grunts to groans and from anger to hard hitting, members of both squads intimidated opponents on and off the court.

Invitationals Highlight Season

High school athletic contests usually consisted of a competition between only two or three teams. In track and field, however, competitions called invitationals often consisted of over 40 teams all competing with each other, to create an exciting, and often hectic, atmosphere unique to the sport. For some athletes invitationals existed as a highlight of the season. "I'm like a little kid on Christmas morning when we're at Invitationals," senior Nick Higgins said.

Invitationals differed from ordinary dual or tri-meets by more than simply the number of athletes. "The difference between an invite and a regular meet is about four hours," Higgins said, observing how invitationals often lasted late into the night due to the sheer volume of competitors in each event. Everyone seemed to develop a favorite competition over the years. Echoing the sentiments of many fellow athletes about their favorite invitational, senior Kristina Hendrick said, "Baldwin, because it's an all day event and you get to see the different levels of competition from schools all around the area."

In the back of the training room, junior Zach Henley fills an ice bag for an injured athlete. "If we showed up late, Heather threatened to make us come twice as early, but she never went through with it," said Henley. He took care of the girls soccer team and the boys basketball team.

Train the Trainers

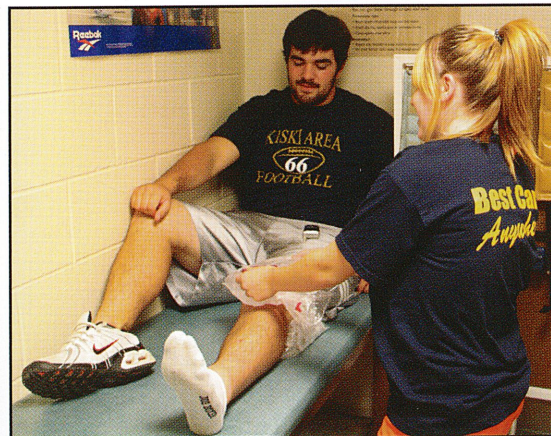

Workshop Wraps Trainers in New Skills

"We went to a UPMC workshop in Pittsburgh. We did labs such as wrappings and spine boarding which were interesting," junior Sam Yocca said about the training workshop all the trainers attended this past summer. Nine students traveled down to UPMC SportsWorks to receive training in skills they would use throughout the year at different sporting events, specifically in first aid, CPR, and AED. KAHS made up the largest contingency at the workshops with the most students from one school in attendance.

When asked about her favorite memory from the workshops, junior Dominique Pugliese, a trainer for football, wrestling, and baseball, said, "There were nine of us on a freaking huge bus. On the way there, we hit a bump. Justina Cerra got up, looked around, asked 'Did we hit a goat?' We told her no, so she went back to sleep."

Throughout the year, the trainers had many hilarious experiences, but they never fell short when needed to attend to serious matters.

Fierce focus...

Shortly after senior Lauren "Butt" Butler spiked the ball in a Norwin defender's face, senior Ciara Brown prepares for a dig. "I really loved sitting on the bench and cheering insanely with Charisse Skinner," said Brown. The girls lost the game against Norwin--the last game the seniors played together.

Hot hands...

As she travels through the tunnel of players, senior Kelly Dunlay slaps hands with her teammates before a big match. "It saddened me that this was the last time I would walk through my line of friends. It made senior night so much more emotional," said Dunlay. The match went into 5 games and the girls ended up falling a bit short to the Norwin Knights.

Hands-on Preparation

Unique Drills Enhance Skills

Story by Nicole Titler, 12

"Butler would lead stretches and then we would 'pepper' with our partner," said senior Kelly Dunlay, reminiscing of her volleyball practices. The members of the volleyball team had a distinct set-up to their practices. The team used a definite order to get the most out of their work. After warming up, they did their basic drills. These drills helped prepare for their matches by enhancing the athletes' skills. The 'butterfly drill' honed in on serving and receiving skills. Two passers stayed on one side of the court while the other girls served at them. The team focused on rotations, special hitting techniques, and defensive moves.

"If we were lucky, we would eventually scrimmage," said Dunlay. Each team member played in the scrimmage, which made them the team's favorite way to practice. The least favorite drills of the team included the ones where the team had to get a consecutive number of perfect passes to finish the drill. These drills led to many frustrating moments for the team members. Even during their least favorite moments in the practices, the team did everything to enhance their playing skills.

Battled & Bruised

Players Relish Sport Viciousness

"Imagine the Spartans epic clash with the Persians, only with girls in cleats and jerseys," said senior Meg Mszyco, recalling some of the fiercest clashes encountered during soccer games. Soccer players often combated viciousness and ferocity on the soccer field, whether on home turf or behind enemy lines. Armed with their cunning, speed, agility, cleats, and shin guards as their only armor, the warriors charged into battle, or what they called just a typical game. They met their adversaries face-to-face, staring straight into the eyes of the enemy. Bones crunched, blood emerged, and bruises became inevitable battle scars from a particularly brutal showdown. This resilient horde of athletes endured the most aggressive slide-tackles and often not-so-accidental collisions of the head, resulting in either a face full of earth or the raw burn of the astro-turf.

Despite the ruthless, violent nature of the game, the players only grew fonder of it. "We got knocked down, kicked, and thrashed by opponents and teammates alike. It was great," said senior Anthony May.

Divers Complement Swim Team

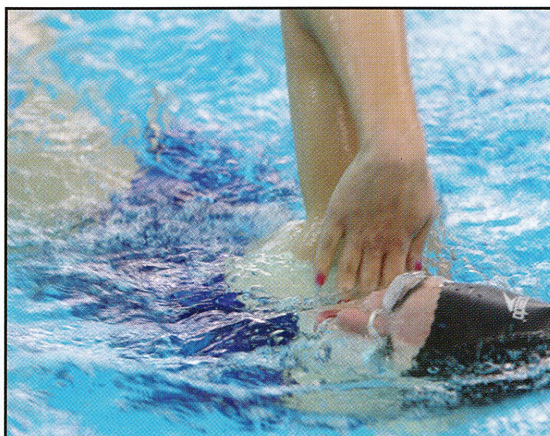

"Being up on the board, it was a different kind of exhilarating," senior Brittany Brasiola said. When thinking of hours spent by the pool-side, summer usually came to mind. However, for the swimmers and divers, their sport surfaced in the frosty winter months. The hours spent devoted to laps, conditioning and meets seemed a far stretch from the relaxation and delight of sunbathing.

The divers and swimmers shared a tight bond, and participated in meets as a team. Though team members, they had different drills and practice techniques. The divers worked on their form and execution while the swimmers perfected their speed and endurance. So how did they cope with the cold of the season coupled with the dampness of their sport?

"When we weren't practicing, us divers found warmth in our own hot tub," Brasiola said with a smile. For the members of the team, the idea of splashing into the cool waters of the high school swimming pool illustrated the perfect after school activity, with or without the warm rays of the sun.

Stunts/Flips Impress Crowds

Story by
Susan Kessler, 11

"My favorite stunt was probably the pyramid, because it was hard, but we still did it. We practiced stunts more than anything else, but it was worth it because they were impressive," sophomore Kathryn Summerville said. The relative merits of cheerleading as a sport leads to the timeless argument of mocking one another's activities until someone ends up crying and locked in a existential crisis. However, if the amount of time athletes spend in the air counts, cheerleading easily defeats most other athletic forays as a sport.

Traditionally, cheerleaders have at least gained their share of respect from the humble masses who watch, slack-jawed, as the squad throws that girl from the last row of History class in the air, as she flips at least twice, not to mention that she never stops smiling. "Cheerleading was a lot more work than some people think; it took a lot of strength and practice to polish the routines," said Summerville, about the trials of cheering. Frankly, perhaps we all should let anyone who can perform these stunts with the same agility throw the first stone.

Par Payments?

Golf Costs Drive Players toward Poverty

"You are not supplied with anything: clothes, shoes, club resizing. You might be given one ball for a match, but other than that, you must pay on your own," senior Tiffany Brucker said about the golf team. Long considered a pastime of the elite upper classes, golf has shown itself as an exceptionally expensive sport. Considering that some of the most prestigious courses cost $125,000 for a yearly membership, the reputation certainly came with due cause.

Team members may have played for free on a golf course during practice, but the families of the individual players supplied anything additional. "It doesn't really bother me, but as you become a better player, you must pay for more. For example, I now have to buy a full set of clubs for college," Brucker said.

In addition to the economically debilitating cost of play, the team also splurged on fast food. "We hit up Wendy's everyday before a match," Brucker said.

From pre-game feedings to the financial hardships necessary to become a better player, golfers certainly each hit a hole-in-one, straight and deep into their pockets.

Wrestlers Maintain Dynasty Status

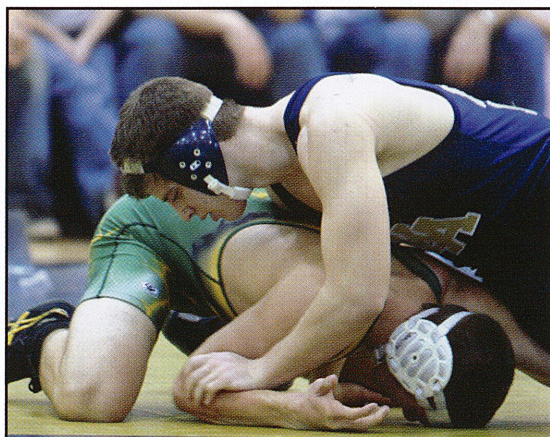

"My favorite thing about wrestling is when Coach Tursky compliments one of my moves," senior Mike Cochran said about his sport. It did not take much to see why some occasional validation ranked high among the preferred aspects of wrestling. While other sports may have had off years, building years, and, frankly, bad years, wrestling remained a constant boon to the school's image.

Any one student in the school could easily name wrestling among the best two sports at the high school during any given year. Of course, only the top three if Marching Band counted; if not, the wrestling team ranked almost always in the top two. With such a high success rate, one could only assume that the standards for the team would have a direct correlation, which proved correct.

"The hardest thing was having to practice against Tony Clark," said Cochran. Of course, these standards existed as a necessity for the wrestling dynasty to remain strong and secure. "Remaining a dynasty requires hard work, determination, and, of course, the Cavalier logo on the singlet," said Cochran.

Senior Sprints to Spectacular Season

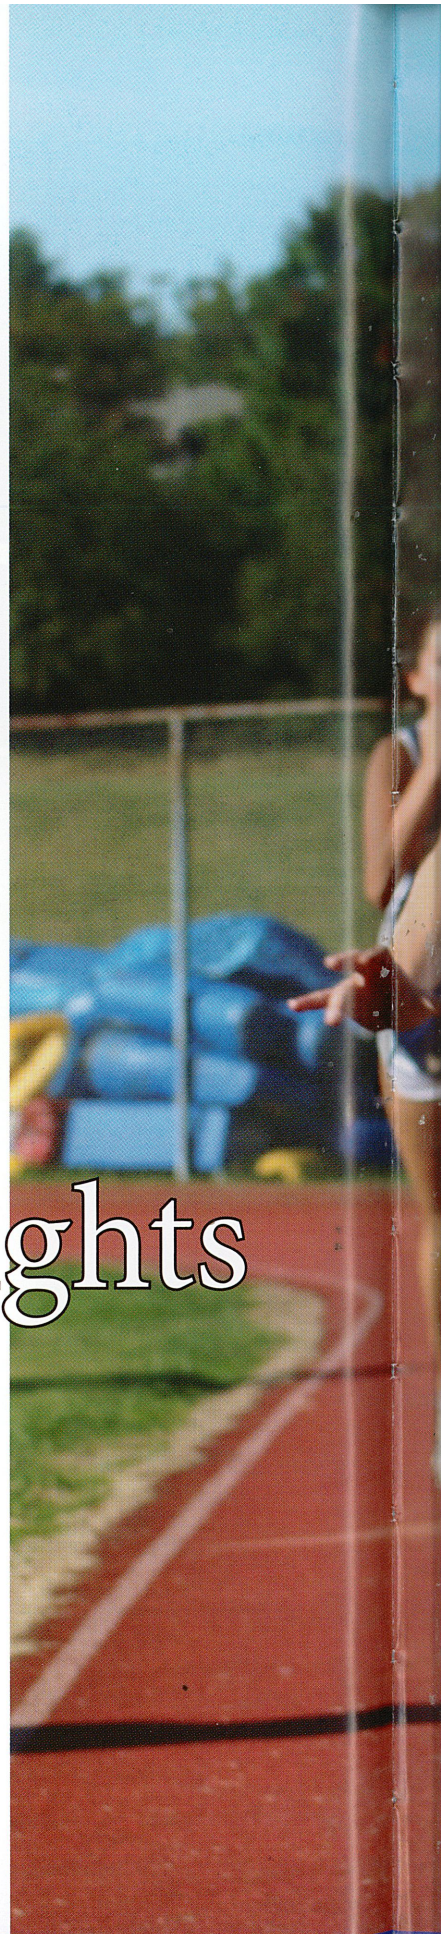

Story by

Cross country runners over time have earned a reputation that finds them among the "craziest" athletes in the school. Such a reputation certainly has a basis in reality, as few people would willingly subject themselves to ten-mile distance runs. Leading this pack of hyperactive athletes, senior Chuck Moyes managed to stand out and make his way all the way to the state meet.

"I've never seen Chuck run, but I did see him break the sound barrier once," senior Travis Charlton said in reference to observing Chuck's famous speed at cross country practices. "I really wanted to make it to states since tenth grade, but I kept breaking my foot every year. I tried training differently this season to see if I could stay healthy," Moyes said in reflection on his high school career.

Reaching the very highest stage in high school running also proved an enjoyable experience for Chuck. "States was awesome! Everywhere you looked, you saw other athletes with the same passion for the sport," Moyes said. Certainly, Moyes continued the strong presence of local cross country runners at the state level.

Team Pitches Comments on Bench Chatter

"We mostly just sat on the bench and made our nice little comments to each other. Usually, we just picked a girl and tore her apart amongst ourselves; Gateway was our favorite," said Junior Ashley Zantotto on the subject of team rivalries. Team rivalries have held a particularly warm and cushy spot in the corner of athletes' hearts through the ages, and the softball team proved no exception. In general, though, the rivalry took a reasonably dignified tone, usually finding its outlet in quiet trash talking and inside jokes.

"There was this one girl who was really tall, her stance was hilarious; she would bend her knees really low, like she was in a chair, and hold her right hand up like a claw. We called her the dinosaur," Zantotto continued, laughing at her memories of a first baseman at an away game at Gateway.

While these details might have caused the heavily principled to feel a twinge of guilt for the unfortunate dinosaur, it seemed a reasonable bet that these rivalries wouldn't end any time soon.

Nerves of 'steal'...
In attempt to avoid a steal at third, senior Kory Kirchartz gets into position to make the tag. On great advice Kirchartz said, "You will never be able to soar with the eagles if you are surrounded by turkeys." The umpire called the runner out and the play saved a run scored.

Down and dirty...

Quickly scooping up the ball in a game against the Latrobe Wildcats, sophomore Corey Krivoski tags the runner at third. On whether or not a sliding runner makes him nervous, Krivoski said, "I don't get intimidated very easily so it doesn't." He especially loved playing games against the Gateway Gators.

Here's your sign...
With the next pitch in mind, senior Tyler Beitel looks at the catcher for signs. "I had to look at the catcher's signals to see if I had to adjust my alignment for each pitch," said Beitel. In addition to pitching, Beitel played shortstop on the varsity team.

Off Season Hits

Regular Season Success Reflects Regiment Before

One would assume that all of the work done by an athletic team would happen while the players wore their uniforms, or at least during the course of the season. However, the opposite held true for the baseball players. Year-round, the young athletes participated in off-season training sessions for any player who showed an interest in improving his game. "Anyone who wanted to be good trained off-season," senior Kory Kirchartz said. The workouts ranged from harsh conditioning to simply playing the game. Conditioning regularly consisted of lifting weights, distance runs, and suicide sprints.

"Weight conditioning was important for me to keep my arm strong in the off-season," junior Frank Brank, a pitcher, said. "I also practiced my pitch. I just threw as many times as humanly possible." The boys spent innumerable hours outside in fielding practice as well. They began batting, throwing, and fielding months and months before the real games actually began. When that time came, the team performed like champions.

Floor fight...

After his opponent lost control of the ball, sophomore Zach Simmons attempts the steal. Simmons said, "I always hustle and dive on the floor to get loose balls." The referee called a jump ball after this confrontation.

Master defender...
At a home game on Saturday, January 19, 2008 against the Altoona Mountain Lions, sophomore Zach Barker attempts to block a shot. "The Altoona team had a forward who could jump really high. He was really hard to defend," said Barker. Barker also competed on the golf team.

Team Introduces Meet & Greet

Story by
Renee Krynock, 12

The players, the fans, the dancing in costume... This set the stage for the 2007 Boys Basketball Meet and Greet. To get everyone fired up, the teams held a social for the start of the new season. It made a great introduction for all the players, from the fresh seventh grade team to the formidable varsity, and gave the guys a chance to flaunt their skills with a three-point shout-out and a dunk contest.

"I was impressed how much work the coaches and boosters put in to make it a big event," said sophomore player Pat Carter in reflection. Another team member, junior Alex Pulsifer said, "It went well. I would have liked to see more students in the stands, but as long as they come to the games I don't mind." The event left fans and players alike hungry for a winning season.

The night held more than just a competitive atmosphere, however. "The best part had to be when Beak (Zach Barker) came out in the Superman uniform and danced 'Soulja Boy' with Jeff Jackson." The team hoped to use their moves on the court to make their opponents dizzy.

Forward junior Stephanie Yocca attempts a foul shot against the Uniontown Raiders. "Before I shoot each shot, I take one step up to the foul line, dribble the ball twice, and then go for it," said Yocca. She played basketball since she attended fifth grade at Allegheny Hyde Park Elementary School.

Floor diving...

Keeping her balance, junior Heather Hobbins dives for the ball in a game against the Norwin Knights. "It seemed like I spent a ton of time on the ground this season. You have to do whatever it takes to gain possession of the ball," said Hobbins. She also competed on the high school's volleyball and track & field teams.

Shoot for the stars...

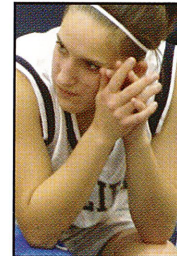

Ready to defend the ball, senior Lauren Butler concentrates on her job as shooting guard. "I hated playing Norwin because they are always really cocky and we were the only team to come close to beating them," said Butler bitterly. Besides basketball, Butler loved performing gymnastics.

Rivalries Motivate Team to Succeed

"Don't even mention rivalries, we have quite a few," senior Lauren Butler said as a look of fierce determination crossed her face. The girls basketball team, notorious as one of the most spirited and competitive teams Kiski had to offer, never left a game unfinished. When faced with any one of their many rivals, the girls applied their well-rehearsed plays and skills to the game with stunning drive and fearlessness.

"In some cases, such as Hempfield, only certain players presented a threat to us," junior Lauren Bettie said. "But other rivals, such as Latrobe, were solid throughout," senior Jenny Meighan said.

Members of both the varsity and junior varsity teams had much to voice about their adversaries. On game days, the basketball players passed each other in the halls and offered words of encouragement for the battle to follow. Still, the true motivation to win came from the hearts of the players.

Accordingly, Butler said, "It really never came down to who we played. It so much more came down to HOW we played and whether we could capitalize upon our own talents."

What role does team chemistry play toward a winning season?

SiMiX

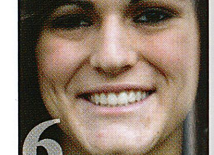

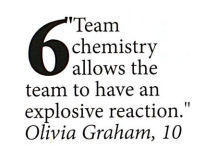

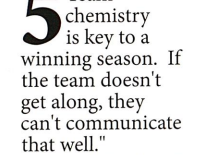

1 "You definitely need team chemistry to have a winning season. You have to be able to bond and click with your teammates."
Shelby Clever, 11

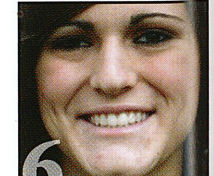

2 "It was my first year on the team, but I noticed chemistry in the team is a huge part of winning."
Paul Crooks, 11

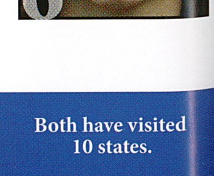

4 "It is one of the most important factors. You have to enjoy playing together."
Kristina Hendrick, 12

5 "Team chemistry is key to a winning season. If the team doesn't get along, they can't communicate that well."
Andrew Weigold, 12

6 "Team chemistry allows the team to have an explosive reaction."
Olivia Graham, 10

What will it take for the Pirates to finally have a winning season?

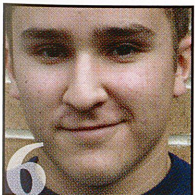

1 "The Pirates need to get some offense and to quit trading away every good player they get."
Kory Kirchartz, 12

2 "Get Mr. Christie as their head coach."
Ben Doyle, 10

3 "The Pirates need to keep the younger players that are good and spend some money."
Corey Stascek, 11

4 "For the Pirates to have a winning season, it would take a lot of hard work and another slugger in the lineup."
Cody Thompson, 10

5 "They need a coach who wants to win instead of trading off all their talent."
Frank Brank, 11

6 "A lotta hop, and a whole lotta D."

Air ball...

During a chilly November afternoon activity period, senior Allie Hileman and members of the Bocce Club compete in a friendly match. "We couldn't believe it when us three girls lost to the one freshman boy, Troy Fulton. We didn't even score a point, but he was nice enough to spot us one," said Hileman. Sponsored by Mr. Swanson, the members of the club enjoyed playing in its first year of existence.

Open sesame...

In an attempt to rip off the door, seniors Andy Kron and Mike Schantz partake in the NHS Car Smash. Kron said, "The rain didn't stop everyone from having a great time. Mike and I took swings at the door hoping it would fall off its hinges." Outside of school, Kron worked at Abercrombie and Fitch in Monroeville Mall.

On the run...

With the ball tucked away securely, junior Ellie Weyant tries to avoid tacklers during the Powder Puff football game. "The juniors didn't have much of a strategy. We just went out and had fun," said Weyant. She played football every opportunity that she had.

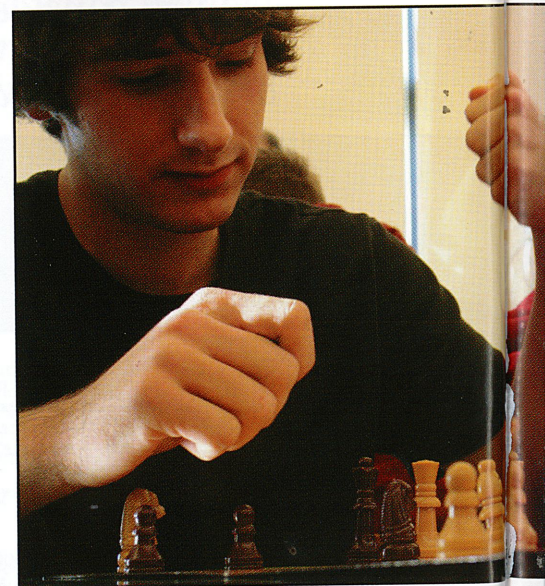

Raise the flag...

At the Car Cruise fund raiser for marching band, senior Amanda Dunmire swings her two flags to reflect the music. "Practices were long and tiring, but they were worth it in the end," said Dunmire. The colorguard titled this ballad move as the numchucks.

Trash talk...

For Environmental Club, senior Tonilynn Frazzini empties paper from a collection bin into her bag for recycling. "I save all of my useless papers at home and bring them into school to recycle," said Frazzini. She recalled missing the bag and spilling papers all over the floor.

Check it out...

On an afternoon activity period in Mr. Vergari's room, senior Corey Shellhammer makes his move against senior Matt Yandura. "My bishop doesn't preach peace or lead religious practices, but it has a heart of cold plastic and ferociously stamps the enemy," said Shellhammer. He also played chess once a month in a Pittsburgh league.

Order in the court...

In the high school library, senior Anthony May and sophomore Joe Stopansky prepare statements for Mock Trial. Getting giddy...

On a cold November fifth Monday, while high school kids in the district spent the day at home or still in bed, the Campus yearbook staff came to the school to link students together for the chain at the bottom of each spread. "Mr. Fantaski lured us in with food and little did we know that it would take over eight hours to link a little over 100 people. We got so giddy that we decided to throw all of the surveys up in the air to see if they would link themselves," said photography editor, Jaimi Hicks. The staff created the chain without duplicating a single student.

Editor(s) of the Year

Each year, I choose one or more persons as my "Editor(s) of the Year." I reserve this award for student(s) who have served as editor for at least two years. Note that my editor-in-chief cannot receive the award. Hence, Alex, thank you for your commitment. I only hope that someday our yearbook will equal your brilliance. Also, Maggie, I so wanted to give this to you...but for once, I stuck to my rules. Thank you for all you've done!

I chose Mr. Neal Henry as my single editor of the year for one reason - in my opinion, he has done more for our yearbook than any other editor. For two years, Neal has gone out of his way to make sure that every student had a chance to appear in the book. Additionally, Neal has shot some of the most incredible sports pictures to date. He has also selflessly volunteered to complete business tasks necessary to finance the book. From PF to NH, this space belongs to you, and I couldn't have chosen a better guy. Congrats buddy!

Piece by piece...

Editor-in-Chief Alex Nigra looks for connections to complete the chain of 762 students across the bottom of each spread. Nigra said, "Doing connections with many people was actually fun, as the competitive 'Bingo' spirit broke up the monotony." Nigra and his staff wanted to thank the faculty for their continued support of yearbook functions at the high school.

Mellow yellow...

As everyone rustles through surveys, junior Jaimi Hicks and senior Renee Krynock try to find an individual who has never visited Kennywood. Trying to decipher sloppy handwriting, Krynock said, "The worst one was from freshman Nathan May who used yellow highlighter on the whole thing." Everyone totally agreed with Krynock.

Ready to capture the moment, senior photography editor Maggie Land focuses in on the next play. "Being on the field was one of my favorite football game experiences. I loved how intense the games seemed from the sidelines," said Land. She hoped to attend Pratt Institute in New York City to major in photography.

Pass it on...
Ready to write a Quick Quote Pass for senior Tyler Beitel, senior reporting editor, Allie Hileman, looks up where Beitel spends his sixth period. "By the end of the year, I was sick and tired of writing passes for students who wouldn't show up. We had to write four passes for some students," said Hileman in disgust. She and the three other reporting editors gathered almost 900 quotes from students.

razy Connections

Campus Staff Links 762 Students in Chain of Pain

For Six Degrees Connex Us, the fearless yearbook staff stepped up the coverage of the entire student body to historic levels. Besides substantially increasing the amount of quotations present in the book, the staff undertook the most monumental task in yearbook history, connections. The connections concept, based on the book's theme, sought to create a string of interesting links between over 750 random students.

The process of actually connecting students through surveys consisted of a twisted game of Bingo in which one editor would call out something interesting from a student survey and the others would try to match it with a fellow classmate. Over time, a beautifully torturous love-hate relationship blossomed.

"I'm so sick and tired of doing connections that if I had to do one more I'm going to kill myself," senior Josh Barszczewski said jokingly during the homestretch of the connection string. "Discerning the student body's colorful array of terrible handwritings was just a joy to my retinas," senior Courtney Grafton said in agreement. However, many truly enjoyable memories came from the often outrageous survey responses provided by the students. Some of the favorites included the surprisingly popular "state of Chicago" as well as the startling revelation of a student having a family relation to a famous racehorse. "I really enjoyed when people responded to questions such as 'Which states have you visited?' by saying 'yes,'" senior Shauna Miller said. "It was a challenging experience, however it was fun to link people with off the wall connections," junior Jen Zatko said effectively summarizing the linking experience.

Robertson has danced for nine years under the Just Dance Company in Vandergrift, PA.

In this position, I feel as if I am responsible for the result of our season. Especially with us competing in nationals next year, I believe my expectations are high. I am ready for the challenge.

In front of the home section at Davis Field, senior Katlin George performs the National Anthem. "It was thrilling to sing in front of so many people. I can't believe I actually got to sing the National Anthem at a game," said George. She rated her level of nerves during the performance as an 8.5679 out of ten.

Members of the marching band perform their ballad, Watermark, at Youngstown State University. Senior Allie Sullivan said, "During this performance, I made a careless mistake of not going to my set. I marched straight back instead of marching right and ran right into Kate Pollick." The band won the AA competition.

After winning the event for the high school division, Mszyco donated her prize to the Huskuliak Art Scholarship Fund.

Individualized Costumes Enhance Performances

Story by Susan Kessler, 11

"It's really funny to see someone with a really serious personality put on a bright blue sequined dress or a blue silk shirt and dance to songs like 'I Got the Music in Me,'" said junior Dominique Pugliese about the occasionally amusing, but overall enriching, show choir performances. Many students lived a double life during the school year, sporting sweat pants and baggy tee shirts by day, but donning bright, sequined dresses by night. This transformation, of course baffled most even more, because the quiet, introverted kid in the back row of History class sang and danced to, quite possibly, the peppiest dance tunes ever written. Many students could not believe the spectacularly bright costumes.

"The boys looked like Latin pop stars, and the girls looked like fireworks," Pugliese went on to say. Of course, even the blinding, bedazzled show choir costumes could never hold a candle to the prison striped girls of the colorguard for the marching band's heart-themed show, "The Rhythm of Life." Most students seemed to generally feel that the costumes looked good from the stands, but bizarre close-up. Of course, the color guard did have a reputation for the unique and the dramatic, with each member wearing the exact same make-up, sporting the exact same hairstyle, and waving the exact same flag as the other; purposely by design, one should never pick an individual out on the field.

In the end, though, no one could argue that each group's costuming added a certain flare to performances. From seas of sequins to series of stripes, those that performed certainly wore their costumes well.

Pearly whites...
Grinning from cheek to cheek, junior Grace Evans dances to White Christmas as a member of KAndescence Show Choir. "Smiling is contagious; it makes people happy. Besides, how could I not smile with Jordan serenading me?" said Evans. She enjoyed dancing with Jordan Talmadge because he always changed lyrics to make her laugh.

Sweet victory...
After winning the PIMBA State Championship, junior Beka Aber performs in the band's victory show. "We all got on the bus to go back to the school and all our parents were honking their horns in the parking lot for us," said Aber fondly. She further said that the band didn't get back until around one in the morning.

Being a part of the mock trial team means you had to be a bit crazy. Mock trial certainly had its appeal. A group of close-knit individuals with a notable interest in law comprised the group, but there was much more to it than that. Mock trial required a combination of knowledge of law, shrewdness, and quick-wittedness. However, members of the team definitely had their share of fun with the club, whether from mock trial parties or joking around at practices, which had spawned countless inside jokes that only a person in the club could fully appreciate.

Singing Good Morning Baltimore, senior Maria Bruno performs in front of a huge audience at the Key Club Talent Show. Bruno said, "The amount of adrenaline in front of a crowd during the show was much greater than auditioning." She further said that she loved performing in front of very large audiences.

Sick solo...

Just after winning states, senior Renee Krynock performs a solo flute cadenza at Elizabeth Forward High School. "I had pneumonia at the time, so I was just happy I could stand, let alone perform...twice," said Krynock. The event encompassed lots of hugs, tears, and coughing for Krynock.

Under the Problem

Thrill of Competition
Drives Motivated Students

"If there's one thing that drives this team, it's competition," senior Anthony May said, as he dropped his Mock Trial binder onto the library table, exasperated after a long and successful weekend at the Pitt Mock Trial Competition. The harmony exhibited by the Mock Trial Team, as well as the many other competitive academic clubs, resembled the structure and persistence of a well-oiled machine. These teams, including Math Team, Envirothon, FBLA, Quiz Team, and Mock Trial contained a wealth of the most intellectual and spirited individuals that the school had to offer. Some teams practiced two to three times a week, polishing aspects of the competition such as their presentation, content, poise, and execution. On any given day, Mock Trial practiced their objections as the Math Team members scribbled away with their calculators and scratch paper, all while Envirothon members memorized the different kinds of algae.

Whatever the type of competition, team participants made it their expertise, refusing to settle for second best. "There's no rush like being in court," senior Courtney Grafton said of her Mock Trial experience. "It's empowering, actually." All the competitors agreed that the thrill of opposition in the competitive setting could not compare to any other feeling. This driving force provided the inspiration for team members to become completely wrapped up in the spirit of competition. The vast array of academic teams kept students with a hunger for competition on the edge of their seats and on top of their game.

Focus on Funds

Making Money Matters

Story by Joshua Barszewski, 12

"I felt like I was begging for spare change while forcing my peers to donate to Student Council's class challenge," junior Jen Zatko said, referring to the annual fund raiser for telethon. Each night, the brave members of Student Council stood outside of K-mart to collect money for St. Vincent de Paul and Salvation Army. Throughout the school day, passionate students threw their money into coffee cans and waited with bated breath to hear news of which class took the lead. Senior Angelea Kuruc said, "There was a lot of suspense over the weekend before they announced the winner. I was so excited when I found out that the seniors pulled together to kick some junior butt!"

For nearly every organization and club, fund-raising played a major role. Whether trying to raise funds for field trips and parties or donating to a charitable cause, the task proved daunting. "It's more difficult to raise money now since we cannot sell candy. Clubs have had to resort to other options, such as fruit snacks and tee shirts," Drama Club and NHS advisor Mrs. Jacobs said.

With a dash of creativity, however, clubs found their financial difficulties slipping away. "It was difficult to convince people that your cause was worth contributing to. However, people eventually came around and realized that a small act of selflessness, such as donating to a club or charity, was well worth it," junior Susan Kessler said. The time and effort put in to raising funds for clubs and organizations truly paid off in the end.

Ready, set, action...
Just after an audition that dealt with basketballs and tap dancing, junior Ian Vergari films the next person trying out for the Key Club Talent Show. Vergari said, "The hardest part was filming the people who jumped around in the shot." Junior Jim Haugh brought Vergari dinner because he couldn't leave the auditorium.

Assuming the alter-ego of El Macho Muchacho was truly a joy, as the teachers did not enjoy getting destroyed by a masked menace. I honed my dodgeball skills for years in advance and the results were undeniable, as I doubt that they ever got that dodgeball unstuck from the one teacher. After the volleyball game, I drank the sweat and tears of my enemies.

Overall the faculty was unimpressive, my abuela, La Bonita Senorita, threw dodgeballs better than them.

Careful to direct the ball toward his next victim, Mr. Heiny attempts his seventh straight point in a row. On how the faculty pulled off the upset, Heiny said, "We play A LOT of volleyball in symphonic band." Heiny further jokingly said that he deserved the MVP award for the NHS sponsored game.

Students/Faculty
Engage in Fierce Fights

Story by Renee Krynock, 12

"I knew that we were going to crush the NHS, unless they were able to figure out the trajectory of the ball and use it against us, or they decided to use a dictionary instead of a volleyball," said history teacher Mr. Lohr about the first Student Versus Faculty game of the year. Sponsored by the National Honor Society, the game gave teachers and students an opportunity to settle their classroom disputes in a healthy and legal fashion; on the court. "I was hoping to maim at least thirty or forty of the faculty members during the game, but sadly, I was in the back row. Maybe next time," senior Travis Charlton said under the guise of the mysterious El Macho Muchacho. Senior Teal Smail took a more personal approach and said, "The score doesn't matter, I crushed Mr. Lohr and that's all that counts."

The game, while heated, could not possibly stand up to the trash talk it induced. Said band director Mr. Pityk, "I would have expected smart people to have coordination, to have strategy." "They had none," said director Mr. Heiny. "Game? How about a solid student thrashing? It honestly felt like practice," said Mr. Lohr.

Both sides had plenty of chances to polish their athletic skills, but more importantly, their insults throughout the year. Games that ranged from dodgeball to floor hockey pitted pupil against teacher, breaking anything from glasses to fingers. As Mr. Lohr said, "I once saw Teal Smail spike a small mammal in preparation for a student/faculty game." Naturally, this competition made for tremendous entertainment.

Net gains...
In the NHS Students versus Faculty Volleyball Game, senior Rob Iseman attempts to block a shot from Mr. Lohr. "None of us were intimidated by the short teachers like Mr. Kasper and Mr. Lohr," said Iseman comically. The faculty won the event over the students convincingly.

Trash talk...

Playing Dress Up

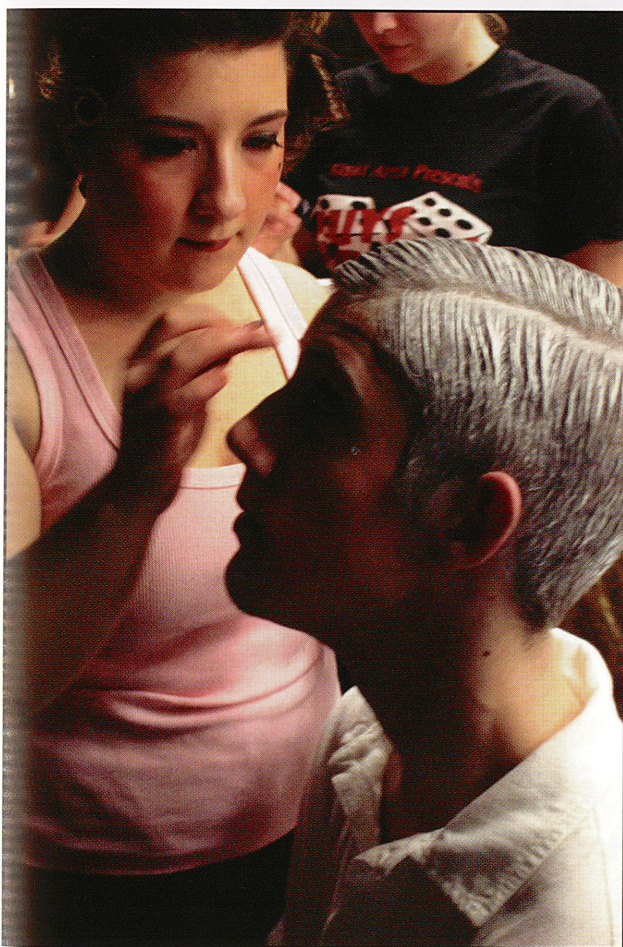

Students Act Out Their Interests

Story by Meghann Wygonik, 12

Driven with energy, members of Good Morning Kiski, the drama club, and the mock trial team enlightened and entertained the students and judges alike. Each and every day, members of GMK staff gathered in the studio to prepare for the morning announcements. Armed with coffee in hand, they changed the decorations, glanced at the day's list, and awaited the signal from senior Brad Arick to start. Recalling a typical morning in the studio, junior Jordan Talmadge said, "Before each segment, I would consult with my fellow anchor to which quote from Anchorman I would use that particular day." Aimed at bringing the news to others, the staff has continued to make each morning not only informative but entertaining as well.

It served as no surprise to find that many of the GMK anchors also participated in the drama club. With an aim to entertain, students also found themselves transcending reality as they took on new personalities. Each year students performed before a spectrum of audiences for a variety of purposes including the fall drama and the Pittsburgh Public Theatre Shakespeare Festival.

No stranger to judges, the mock trial team has competed numerous times on a different type of stage. Armed with case files and statements, they commanded attention in the courtroom as they acted out a criminal or civil court case. The team always enjoyed debating face to face with total strangers as well as the infamous mock trial parties. Whether the performance took place in a classroom, studio, or courtroom, the students continued to 'break a leg' anytime they took to the stage.

Total talent...
Super anxious to show America her talent, junior Kiersten Moyes, performs for the judges in The Bachelor King. "Before I would enter on stage, I literally stood behind the curtain emptying my brain of any thoughts. This was one role where extreme concentration was not needed to stay in character," said Moyes. When not on the stage, Moyes served as president of Anime Club.

Right on target...

Senior buddies Alex Rupeka and Corey Shellhammer engage in a heated snowball fight in the lower cafeteria courtyard. "I got owned," said Rupeka. This throw served as the first ball thrown and hit Shellhammer right in the face.

Pasta profits...

At the fund raiser to support the Lacey Huskuliak Art Scholarship Fund, junior Ellie Weyant strains spaghetti. Weyant said, "It was a really great opportunity to help out in a great cause. We all had a blast in Lacey's honor." Those that aided the Key Club event raised over $800.

Benchmarks...

Recent retiree Mr. Dave Columbus speaks at the bench dedication in memory of former teacher, Elysse Uskuraitis. About the gesture, Mr. Columbus said, "It was an honor to know such a wonderful lady who truly dedicated her life to the field of education. She became a great friend to myself and her colleagues." Faculty and friends gathered together on September 20, 2007 to dedicate a bench in Mrs. Uskuraitis's honor.

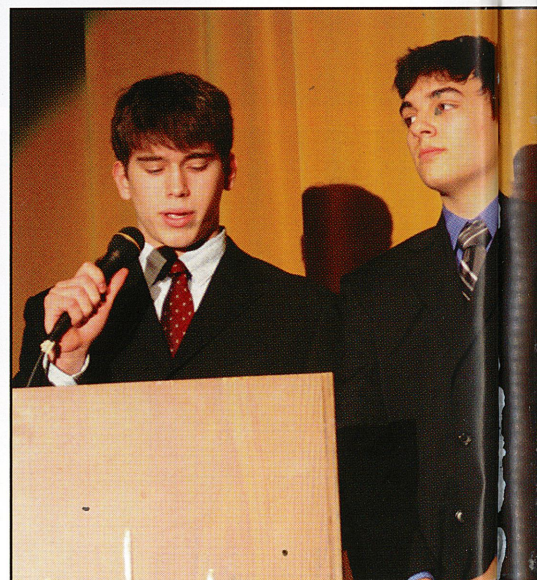

Jump for joy...

At Hidden Valley Ski Resort, junior Jaimi Hicks jumps off of a rail. "I don't even like the cold, so I have no idea why I snowboard," said Hicks. Hicks enjoyed making banana pillows with senior Shauna Miller.

Salad fingers...

At Marchitelli's in Saltsburg, senior Ben Crutchman makes a dinner salad. "I love this job so much that I hope I never get fired," said Crutchman. Crutchman has worked at the Kiski Valley Inn for almost a year, along with senior Shawn Rigatti.

Handsome hosts...

To keep the event rolling smoothly, juniors Jordan Talmadge and Joe Chiodo introduce the next act in the Key Club Talent Show. "I couldn't believe how talented the acts were this year," said Talmadge. Members of the club voted Chiodo as their president for next year.

Down and dirty...
At Northmoreland Park on a February Tuesday, senior Tonilynn Frazzini tackles senior Allie Hileman in a friendly game of football. A mudslung Hileman said, "It started out as football, but when we all got so muddy, it ended up a frenzied tacklefest." Nearly a dozen adventurous seniors gathered together for the spirited community event

Congratulations Bethany!

In the blink of an eye our little girl has grown into a beautiful young woman. We cherish the memories of your childhood and look forward to all that are yet to come. You are strong and determined in your beliefs and we could not be more proud of you.

Always remember to dream big, set your goals high, work hard, and have faith in yourself. Our love and support are always with you.

We Love you, Mom, Dad, Kasey, and Erin

Bethany Serena

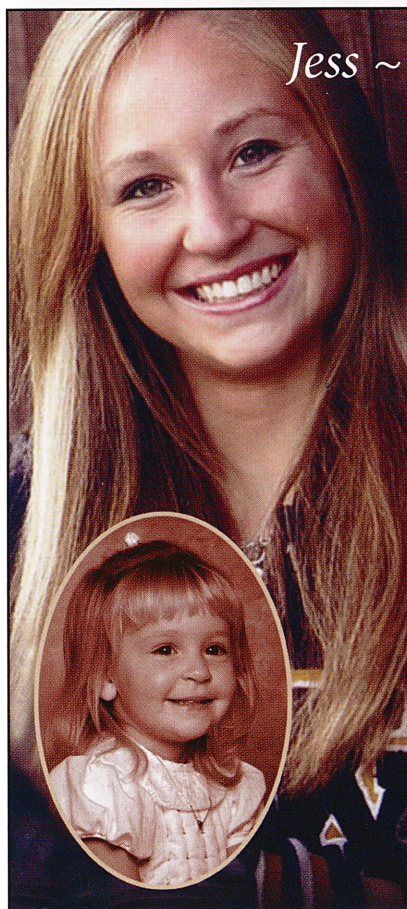

We are so very proud of you, Bethany Rae. You are a beautiful young woman who has given us so many precious memories. Remember to follow your heart and BELIEVE in yourself. May love, success, and happiness follow you always. May God continue to bless you and watch over you in all that you do. Remember that we love you and will always support you in everything that you do. Congratulations!

All our love, Mom, Dad and Raymond

Jess ~

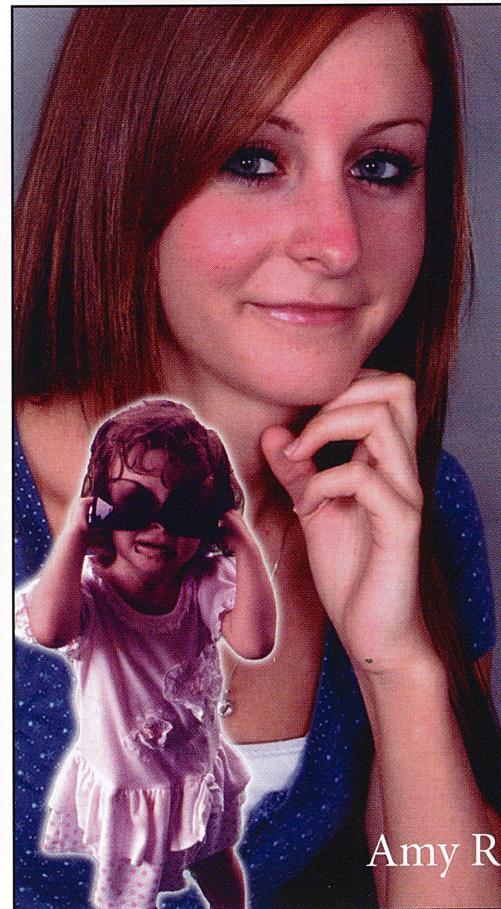

It's so hard to believe that this is really your high school graduation. Its such a cliché, but it does seem like yesterday when you were getting on that big yellow bus for kindergarten. And how can we forget the first time you put on those soccer spikes? Who knew you would evolve into such a dynamic leader and soccer player? You have made us so proud with your incredible drive, determination, and constant consideration for others. Your knee injury proved just how determined you are, as you fought through the difficult times with tears and pain, but it was also a joy to celebrate your accomplishments and watch you develop into the strongest person you've become. Always remember everything happens for a reason. You know you can do anything... don't ever let anyone tell you that you can't!

As your journey onto your next phase at Allegheny, we may not be with you physically, but always know that you'll be in our hearts. You are now the painter with a clean brush and a blank canvas. It's yours to paint. We can't wait to see your finished artwork..it's certain to be a masterpiece!

We love you! Dad, Mom, and Kyle

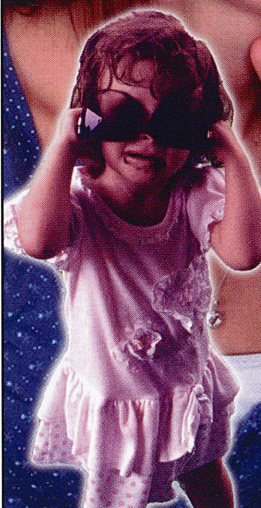

Jesselyn Tezill

Amy,

Though the struggle has seemed like an eternity, the reward has finally paid off. You made it B! Your determination and persistence has helped you achieve your goal. From our tiny, sweet baby you have grown into a beautiful, caring young woman. Through the happy times and sad, we've admired your strength. Always know that wherever you go and whatever you do, we are so proud of you! We know you will succeed. We will treasure you always and will love you forever.

Bub,

You were the 2nd child and only girl of three. You set yourself apart from the others by your strong will and determination. You were the one that ran forward and never looked back. No fear, no regrets. Your differences make you unique. Your values and caring make you the person you are. There is no one like you. You set your goals apart from everyone and it is up to you to achieve them. We support you, love you, and have faith in you to know that the dream lies before you; it is up to you to fulfill, and it's within your reach. Remember this when striving for your goals:

"Life is too short to wake up with regrets. So love the people who treat you right. Forget about those who don't. Believe everything happens for a reason. If you get a chance, take it. If it changes your life, let it." And know that we love you with all our hearts.

May the good Lord be with you down every road you roam...

And may sunshine and happiness surround you when you're far from home...

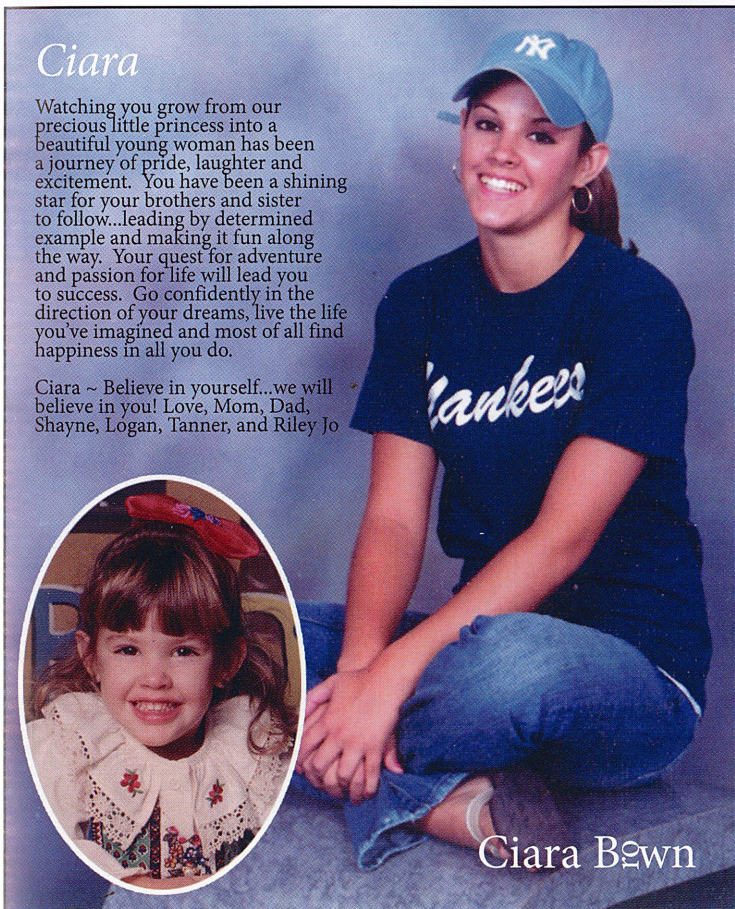

And may you grow to be proud, dignified, and true...

And do unto others as you'd have done to you.

Be courageous and be brave...

And in our hearts you'll always stay forever young.

It is too late to wish success in life for you Maria because you have already succeeded in so many ways!

A sweet, spirited, and strong-willed little girl, you have had to endure more than your share of difficulty and disappointment. And though it wasn't easy for you -or- for us, we watched with admiration and pride as you faced those difficulties with unbelievable strength and courage. We know there were times when you wanted to just give up. But thanks to God, that strong will of yours helped you to persevere!

Through everything, you remained true to yourself and never compromised your values or your faith. You have developed traits that will help you succeed in whatever you choose to do. You possess the strength to handle most of whatever your life has in store for you.

You are a blessing in our lives! It has been an honor and a privilege to watch you grow into a beautiful, talented, fun loving, caring, compassionate, and remarkable young woman. We are so very proud of you and all that you have already accomplished! We wish you nothing but the best life has to offer because that is what you deserve.

Instead, I was the one left standing there with tears in my eyes watching as you anxiously started your life. From that moment, you have grown into a very loving, down to earth, independent, young woman. All these years, it's just been you and me, Lyssie Bell, and we cherished every minute. Shawn,

There are so many memories and the time has gone so fast. When we look at you, we see what everyone else can see, but much more. What we can see is the size of your heart. You have shown heart from the days of t-ball to now. Your enthusiasm and compassion for life, family, friends, and teammates are immeasurable. This quality, to have "heart," has been a source of pride for us. The other quality we can easily see is your sense of humor. There is no question that many of your teachers, and us, would have preferred to see less of it at times, but you have always managed to put a smile on our faces. You have filled our days with laughs, honesty, respect, sportsmanship, competitiveness, love, integrity, and even rap music. As you go on to college, we will miss you, but we know you are prepared to move on to your dreams. Remember with knowledge in your hands, and an open heart, you'll have nothing but success. We are so proud of you!

Where has the time gone? There are no words that can express the amount of joy you've brought us. We loved watching you grow from a clumsy five year old "learning how to skate" hockey player to the hockey player you are now. Your commitment and scholastic achievement make for a very bright future. You're our legacy, our shining star, our hero. Stay as you are and your dedication to overcome will take you wherever you wish to go.

Congratulations!

Ryan Michael,

Congratulations on your graduation!

It seems like yesterday that you were our precious little boy and now you have become a handsome, intelligent, and loving young man. You are a very special part of our lives. We are extremely proud of you and your accomplishments over these years. Your heart-warming smile, special "twinkle" in your eyes, free spirit, and compassionate nature make you a unique person.

Ryan#14

Play and enjoy the game of soccer that you love, with your own skills and determination to not ever quit.

With the help of God's guidance, and your faith, let your heart, soul, and mind set you on your path of life so that you can make your dreams a reality.

We wish you the same joy, happiness, and fulfillment in your future that you have given us by being an integral part of our family.

We love, cherish, and support you in life's journey always and forever. The sky is the limit so reach for the stars!

May God Bless You,
Mom, Dad, Courtney, and Twinkle

Samantha,

It seems like only yesterday we were putting you on the bus for your first day of kindergarten... now we will be sending you off to college. We can't believe how fast you grew up. You have become a beautiful, confident, caring, young lady and we are so proud of you. We will support you in anything you do and we know that whatever you do, you will be a success. Your smile melts our hearts. You are our shining shooting star and your universe is endless. Enjoy your trip.

We love you and believe in you.

Live your life each day as you would climb a mountain. An occasional glance toward the summit keeps the goal in mind, but many beautiful scenes are to be observed from each new vantage point. Climb slowly, steadily, enjoying each passing moment, and the view will serve as a fitting climax for the journey.

From the day you were born, you have brought such joy to our lives. We are so very proud of all that you have accomplished in your life already. We wish you much success and happiness. May God bless you in all you do. And, remember to "Soar with the Eagles!"

From day one, you were always inquisitive. "Why" was your favorite word. If you didn't like how something was, you changed it. You designed things to fit you. You have a very kind heart and were always the counselor for all of your friends. When your buddies had a problem, they called you. So, it's appropriate that the picture of you in the car with the phone in your ear has remained the same throughout your whole life. You will be going off to college soon and it will not be easy. Just remember, we are only a phone call away...but I think you already knew that.

Soon you head out on life's next adventure. As you do, make this poem your guide...

ANYWAY

People are often unreasonable and self-centered. Forgive them anyway.

If you are kind, people may accuse you of selfish motives. Be kind anyway.

If you are successful, you will gain false friends and true enemies. Succeed anyway.

If you are honest, people may cheat you. Be honest anyway.

What you spend years building, someone may destroy overnight. Build anyway.

If you find peace and happiness, some may be jealous. Be happy anyway.

The good you do today may be forgotten tomorrow. Do good things anyway.

If you give your best, it may never be enough. Give your best anyway.

40 Worst

Reflecting a long Campus tradition, the yearbook staff now offers, once again, the 40 worst pictures of the year. The student body looks forward to this part of the yearbook yearly and has submitted all of the photographs that appear on the next 14 pages. The staff added quotes from the people in each picture to add even a bit more whimsy to the index.

Letter from the Editor

It is truly hard to believe that my time on the Campus staff is finally coming to an end. These three years have been an incredible experience, and I feel that no other club has affected me in such a profound way. Creating the yearbook revolves around a strong core of editors. I feel the editors this past year have been the single best group I have experienced, and they deserve much praise.

In my opinion, the clear choice for the most avant-garde staff has to be the Lit. Staff. Josh and Courtney, without a doubt you had some of the most hilarious discussions the yearbook room has ever seen. Susan, I wish you the best of luck next year as you take the reigns of Lit. Staff, I have no doubt you will do a great job.

Terry, Kelly, and Brynn nearly anytime you were in the yearbook room, you were up to the seemingly endless tasks of keeping track of checks and cash, and your hard work was much appreciated. Jenna and Maria, as connections editors thank you for the help in handling the most ambitious task in yearbook history.

Maggie, Shauna, Jen, and Jaimi, the photography in this book was easily the most outstanding to date. Maggie and Shauna, you made the photography in the book into true art, and both of you have amazing vision and creativity to find the perfect shot. Neal, Jordan, Ang, and Allie, I feel the reporting staff had the most demanding workload of all, and you all stepped up and handled this monumental task. Neal, your dedication and the amount of work you put into the yearbook are very admirable. Jordan, being able to come up with the topics for nearly every quote is a real talent, and will serve the staff well next year.

Finally, Mr. Fantaski, you are the greatest advisor a yearbook staff could ever hope to have. The amount of your own time you put into the yearbook cannot be quantified, and shows how dedicated you were to creating an amazing product. You are the reason why the deadlines were met and the end result was exceptional. Thank you for everything you have done for me throughout the years, it has been an honor to have you as both an advisor and teacher. To all those returning next year, best of luck, and keep the tradition of excellence going strong.

Senior-Specific Issues

Senior Portraits

All seniors must have their yearbook portrait taken by the official senior photographer. Gary Gibson from Studio G shot all of the senior portraits for this publication.

In the spring of their junior year, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer conduct an assembly with all prospective seniors to distribute all pertinent information concerning senior pictures. The senior photographer offers various times for individual appointments, as well as a wide variety of packages from which to choose. While we certainly encourage it, students do not have to purchase pictures or packages from the senior photographer. However, each student must pay a sitting fee for the processing and developing of the pictures. This year, Studio G charged $12. This price may increase from year to year due to rising costs involved.

The yearbook staff can guarantee that individual senior pictures will appear in the book only if each student schedules his/her appointment on time, arrives for the shoot on time, and chooses which proof to appear in the book on time. No profile shots will appear in the yearbook. Additionally, the yearbook staff and the senior photographer will define all due dates and will include these in the information given out at the senior portrait assembly.

By having portraits taken by the same photographer under the same conditions, the yearbook staff can implement uniform quality for all photographs, thereby serving the best interests of all students. For the 2008-2009 school year, the district will once again utilize the talents of Mr. Gary Gibson for all senior portraits. His establishment, Studio G, resides in Vandergrift, PA - 202 Longfellow St. - Telephone: 567-1500.

Senior Specials

While considered inappropriate in most yearbook judging forums, the Campus staff feels that the Senior Specials represent a Cavalier tradition worth keeping. Sometime after the winter holiday break, the yearbook staff designates one week for all seniors to vote upon their favorites in a wide variety of categories. The staff collectively decides on which categories to include and which to eliminate. Still, the staff tries only to include categories that reflect positively upon the students.

Only the yearbook adviser counts the ballots for each and every category; yearbook staff members play no role in the election. To maximize the opportunity for each student to receive a Senior Special, no senior may win two categories, with the exception of the "Best Friends" and "Class Couple" categories. Should one student win two or more categories, the yearbook adviser governs the final decision on how to award each category.

Senior Directory

Determined by deadlines, the yearbook staff designates a single week, usually in January or February, for seniors to complete a directory sheet that asks for all of the clubs, sports, music ensembles, academic curriculum, and future plans for each senior. The yearbook staff includes only directory information submitted by the designated deadline and reserves the right to expunge any entries that include falsified information.

Senior Parent Ads

On the first day of school, each senior receives a form that defines everything that parents need to know about Parent Ads. The form defines pricing, requirements for the ad, and relative deadlines.

Later in the year, the yearbook staff will remind parents with another copy of the Parent Ad flyer.

The yearbook staff does its best to personalize each ad and this takes a considerable amount of time. Furthermore, each year, the staff has only a limited amount of space for Parent Ads. Hence, to guarantee that individual ads will appear in the book, the staff suggests that parents submit them as soon as possible. The Campus staff reserves the right to deny Parent Ads once the designated amount of space has depleted.

Client Satisfaction and Pricing

Client Satisfaction

By virtue of the fact that yearbook represents a student conceived, planned, and produced publication, the staff cannot guarantee complete satisfaction to the purchaser. Hence, the staff will refund no money for poor portrait quality, misspelled names, etc. Books returned for refunds must not have any writing in them, and cannot display any damage obviously done by the student. Once returned, the book becomes the property of the staff and may become resold at the current cost.

The yearbook staff will exchange books only for certain reasons. No exchanges will transpire unless the adviser determines that the book has a major flaw such as missing pages or pages printed upside-down. All refunds and exchanges happen only at the discretion of the adviser.

Should the yearbook staff have no record of a student ordering a book, the student must produce a receipt or a cancelled check to demonstrate proof of the purchase. No student may pick up a book for another student.

Pricing

Students order books during Campus Week, the first full week after Labor Day. Each student must fill out a yearbook ordering form, place it in an envelope with the appropriate payment, and drop it in the wooden collection box outside room 106. The yearbook staff accepts 950-1000 orders and then starts a waiting list. Students on the waiting list pay $10 more and do not pay for their books until distribution day.

Students may pay half during Campus Week and half after the December holiday break if they wish. Still, if the student misses the announced deadline for second payments, a late fee will occur.

Fataliti3

Should a student and/or school personnel die anytime during the current coverage period, the staff will treat the death in a professional manner. The staff does not create dedication pages. However, the staff welcomes students and/or parents to purchase a Parent Ad in the back of the book. Additionally, provided that an extra book exists at the end of the year, the staff will donate the book to the family survivors.

Our grand connection existed momentarily and superficially, deeply and genuinely. We developed a kinship from the tenderness of a smile, and character from the coolness of

of a scowl. These times made us laugh so hard it hurt and it hurt so bad we wept.

In these classrooms we experienced compulsory education, on this campus we endured long practices, and with our friends we lived that day, envisioned the next day, and the future. So there you have it...that which connex us...the common space and time that bound us,

our unique dreams and accomplishments. We conquered, we committed, we connected.

Now, we break the ties, but never the bonds.

Alex Nigra, 12th

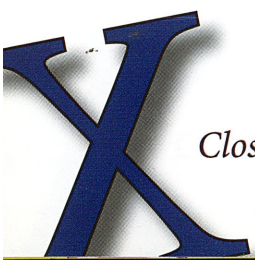

Devine connection...

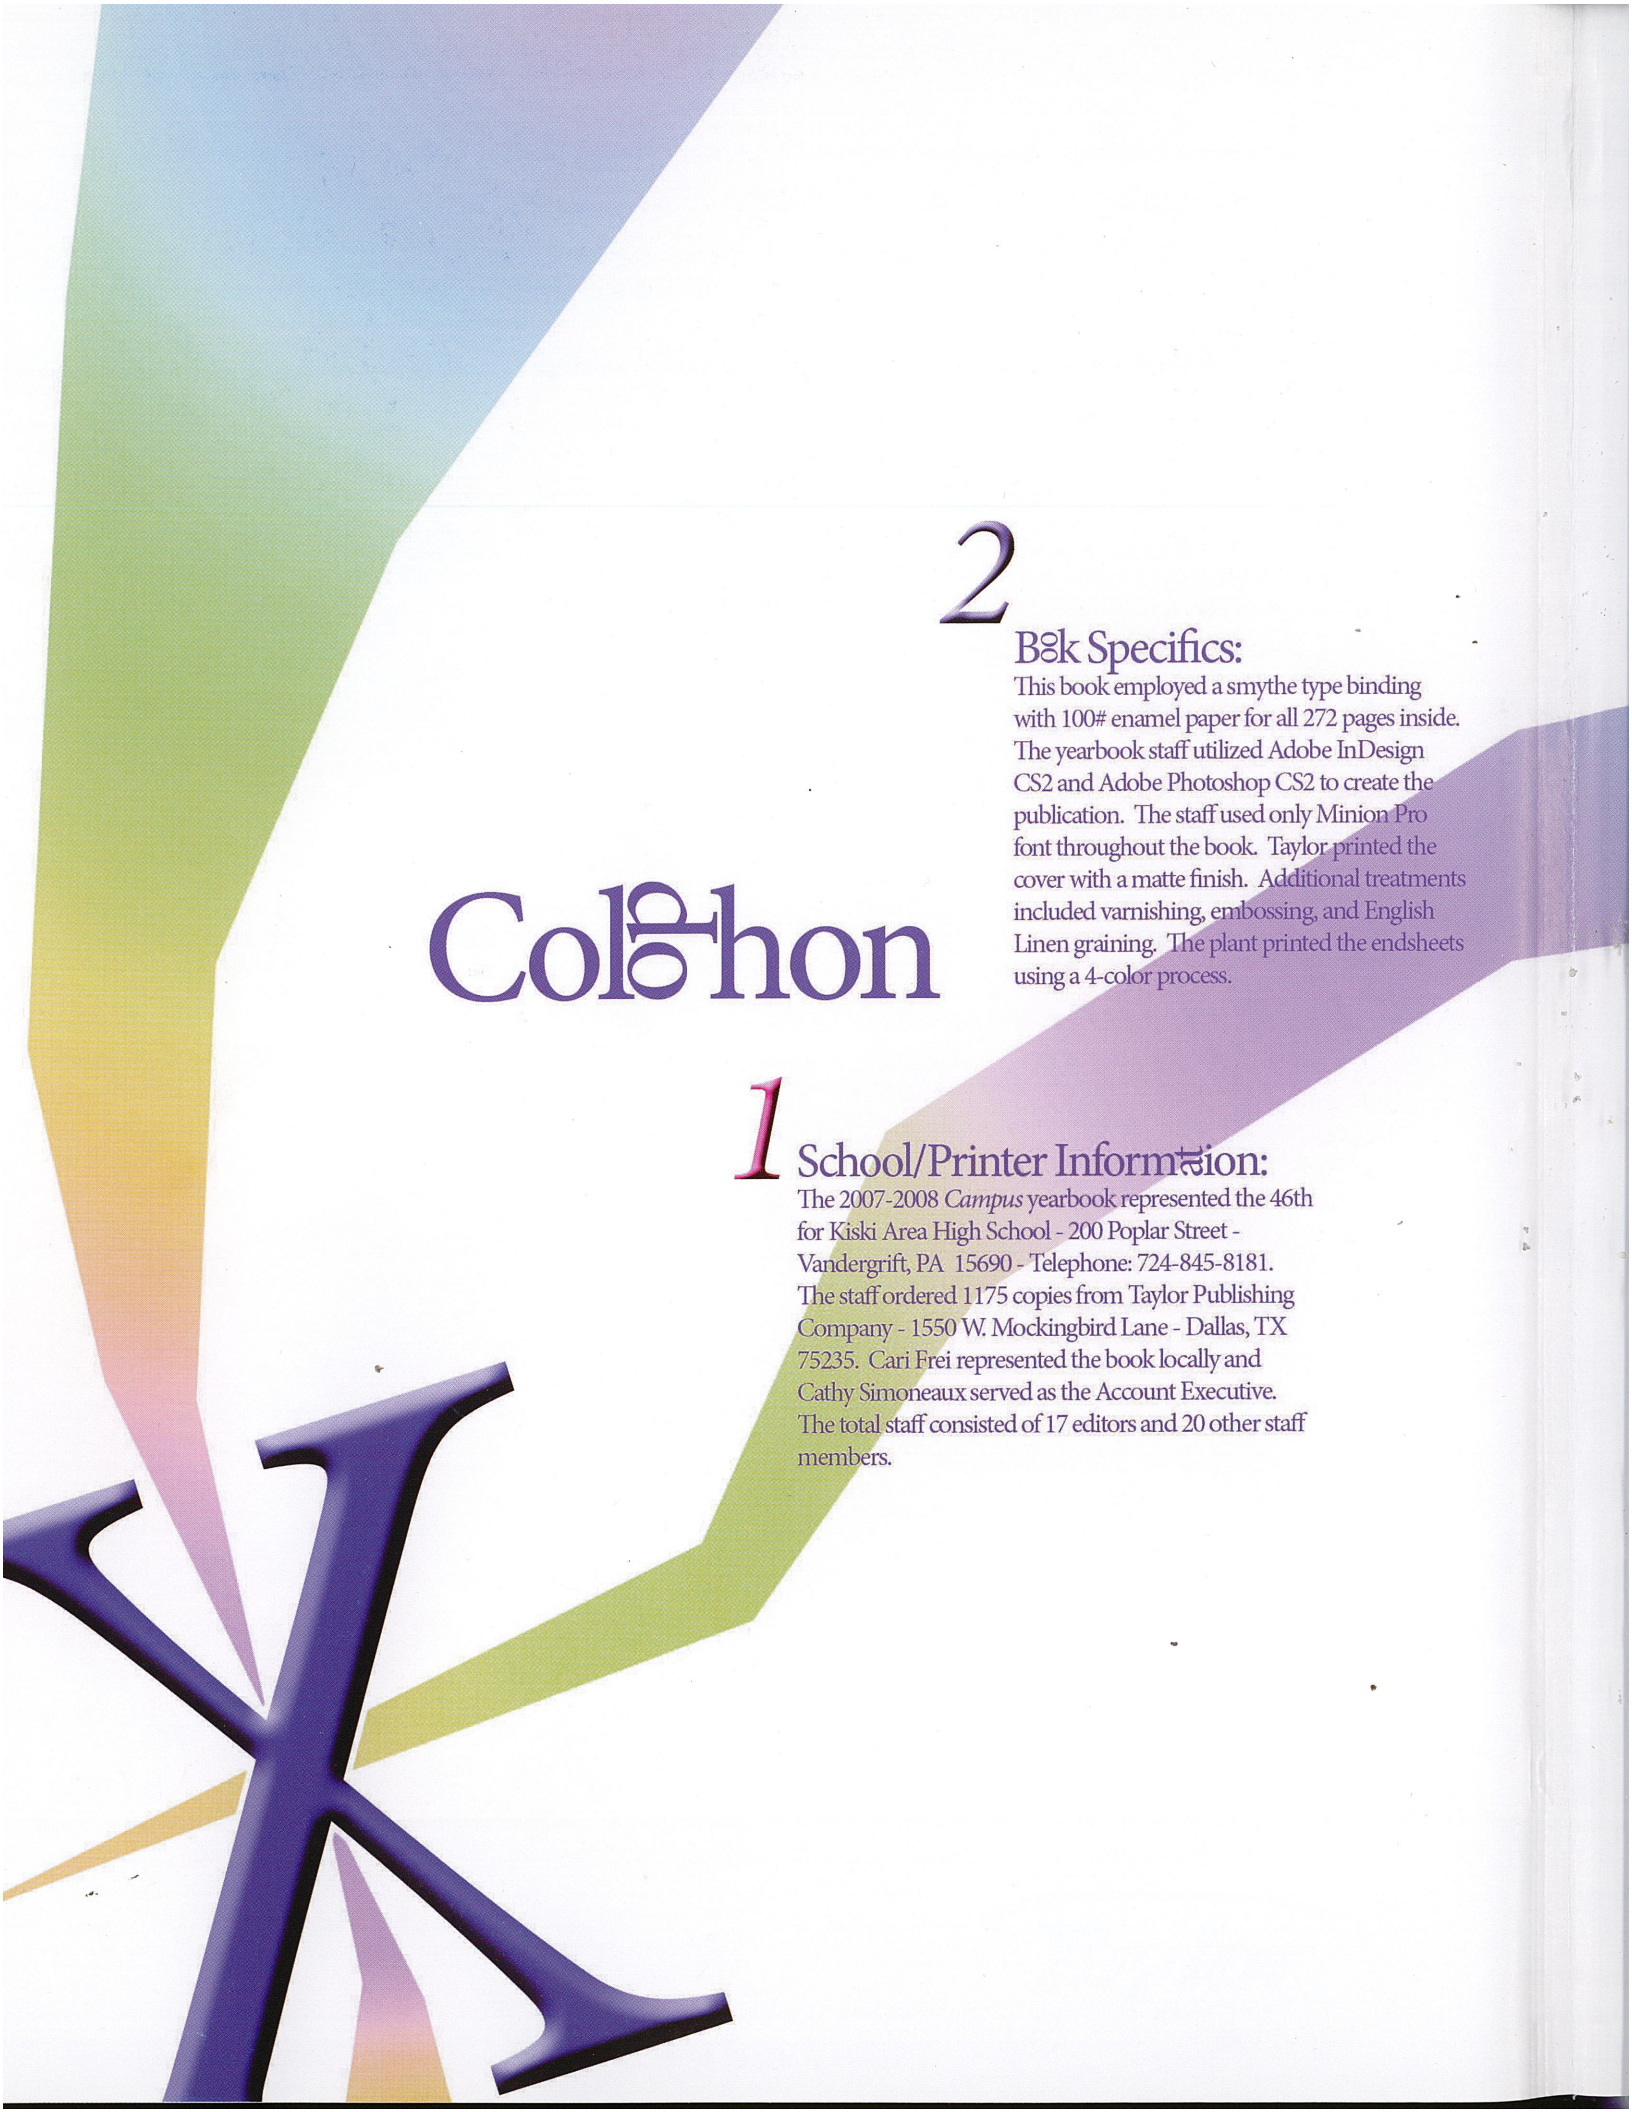

Gathered in front of the flagpole, members of Bible Club stand hand-in-hand to congregate for early morning prayer. Junior Cayla Turner said, "It was really nice to connect with fellow Christians at our school." Participants of the club united each morning to reflect on events of the day and pray for those in need.

Soothing sunset...
At Northmoreland Park on Thursday, March 6, sophomore Dana Huskuliak and senior Maggie Land unite to enjoy one of the most picturesque areas of the district. "Maggie and I have gotten really close this year. She has always been there for me and I love her for that. It was great to have someone to be there for me and my family," said Huskuliak. Additionally, Land said, "Dana has become like my second half and my best friend; we have this amazing connection. We were dorks together."

Book Specifics:

This book employed a Smythie type binding with 100# enamel paper for all 272 pages inside. The yearbook staff utilized Adobe InDesign CS2 and Adobe Photoshop CS2 to create the publication. The staff used only Minion Pro font throughout the book. Taylor printed the cover with a matte finish. Additional treatments included varnishing, embossing, and English Linen graining. The plant printed the endsheets using a 4-color process.
